NHL TEAM PREVIEWS | 48

Coming off one of the most exciting seasons in recent memory, we will again see a tantalizing array of teams who will wage war to claim the Stanley Cup. Will this be McDavid's year? Could the Panthers go back-to-back? Or will history repeat itself with a Cup final encore from 25 years ago? BY THN CORRESPONDENTS

FEATURES

10 THINGS TO WATCH
From the birth of Utah to Alex Ovechkin's chase for history, there is no shortage of storylines for 2024-25.

20
ROOKIE REPORT
Matvei Michkov and Macklin Celebrini are the headliners, but many more freshmen are in the Calder mix.

24
TOP 50 NHLERS
McDavid's dominance makes him an obvious No. 1, but who else makes the cut in our best-of-the-best countdown?

32
CALE MAKAR
He missed out on last year's Norris, but all signs point to him becoming an all-time great. Maybe the greatest ever.

36
AUSTON MATTHEWS
It's been nearly a decade since we saw him in a best-on-best international event. That will change in 2025.

40
VICTOR HEDMAN
He lost his longtime running mate and best Bolts buddy, but he'll no doubt remain a tower of blueline strength.

42
MARK SCHEIFELE
Inspired by the man considered to be the greatest Winnipeg Jet of all-time, he's set to take his place at the top.

46
VINCE DUNN
Underrated? You bet. But if he keeps scoring like he has recently, the hockey world will be forced to take notice.

FANTASY

MYSTERY MEN
We look at one boom-or-bust player from each NHL team. Check these guys out if you're hunting for a sleeper.

NHL

NEW SEASON, NEW STORYLINES

FOR MANY FOLKS, THE 2023-24 NHL season was one of the best in recent memory. From the hotly anticipated debut of Connor Bedard to an absolutely wild final that saw the Edmonton Oilers come back from a 3-0 series deficit, only to have Florida stonewall them in Game 7 for the Panthers' first championship, there was no shortage of drama. Heck, we also had the best year ever for women's pro hockey, as the PWHL soared past initial skepticism to sell out some NHL rinks and provide its own stellar playoff tournament.

So, what do we do for an encore? Luckily, 2024-25 already has some nice pillars upon which to build. You want rookie excitement? How about San Jose's Macklin Celebrini, the youngest-ever winner of the NCAA's Hobey Baker Award? And if you need a foil, Matvei Michkov is ready to make his much-anticipated North American debut with the Philadelphia Flyers. A Canadian and a Russian storming the NHL at the same time worked for Sid and Ovi, so why not Mack and Matvei?

Speaking of Alex Ovechkin, he has a chance to break Wayne Gretzky's all-time goal-scoring record this year. He needs 42 to own the title. With his Washington Capitals adding several veterans with something to prove over the summer, there's a team-wide mission to help Ovechkin get that record.

And after a long drought, some best-on-best international hockey is also coming soon. The 4 Nations will take place in February, when Canada, the U.S., Sweden and Finland battle in two excellent hockey markets: Montreal and Boston. Consider this an amuse-bouche before the 2026 Winter Olympics.

We're also going to see Steven Stamkos in a Nashville jersey, an entire team in Utah jerseys and, I'm going to guess, a playoff revenge tour by Connor McDavid and friends that will keep goalies awake at night.

As for us, you and your wrists may have noticed that this particular issue is bigger than usual. That's because we have combined the Yearbook and Fantasy Pool Guide into one giant tome (in my head, I'm simply calling it 'The Big Book,' though I recognize that when it comes to branding, it would have been silly to lose the Yearbook's equity). Having everything in one book just made sense to us as it gives you, the reader, all the summer reading in one place while avoiding some of the previous repetition. Bonus: if you buy two, you can use them for shinpads once you finish reading.

In all seriousness, though, we're proud of our work on the Yearbook and Fantasy Guide, which has always taken up more of our summers than most folks realize. Putting it all together gives us a chance to look forward to another hockey campaign and all the promise it holds.

Finally, we have to take a moment to remember two members of the THN family. Pastor Glen Goodhand, a hockey historian and longtime contributor, died over the summer at 89. Keeping the history of our game alive has always been one of our objectives, and the Pastor (literally, that was his day job) was an invaluable resource there. He taught me the word "bailiwick," and hockey's fascinating past was undoubtedly one of his.

We must also say goodbye to longtime Bruins correspondent Mike Loftus, who died in July at 65. Not only did he do fantastic work as a stringer, but he was widely respected for his professionalism and well-liked for his excellent sense of humor.

So, without forgetting our past, we also look toward the future – and that starts with the pages you're about to take in.

100th Issue & COUNTING

THE HOCKEY NEWS HIT THE CENTURY MARK WHEN IT COMES TO NUMBER OF ISSUES UNDER THE STEWARDSHIP OF OWNER AND PUBLISHER W. GRAEME ROUSTAN

W. GRAEME ROUSTAN

KEN MCKENZIE

THE HOCKEY NEWS was founded by Ken McKenzie in the most entrepreneurial of ways: he saw a need and filed it. Imagine, if you will, a mid-level manager presenting an idea to the president of a company to fix the problem of the business not getting enough attention in the marketplace by creating their own marketplace. With his vision, conviction and $200, he launched The Hockey News in 1947.

After 32 years of entrepreneurial ownership, he sold it to a U.S. corporation in 1973, which then sold it to a Canadian corporate owner in 1986, which once again sold it to another Canadian corporate owner in 2015, which then sold it to me, a self-described entrepreneur, in 2018. The ownership of The Hockey News has come full (entrepreneurial) circle.

When I was informed that The Hockey News was going to cease publication in 2018 due to declining revenues and readership, I recognized the need to keep The Hockey News alive, so I filled that need by acquiring the business and making an investment in more and better content. Readership and revenues responded immediately and continue to soar each and every year since.

When I acquired The Hockey News, I had absolutely zero experience in the publishing or media industries, but I relied on my decades of experience in building businesses and brands to turn this company around. When I started, it was like I was a kid who just got drafted by an NHL team and was playing in my first season surrounded by veteran players. I knew absolutely nothing out there as I tried to find my game, which I did.

This issue marks my 100th as publisher of The Hockey News during my six years and seven months of ownership. During this time, I have gone from a rookie to a veteran player as a publisher in the industry and now sit on the magazine advisory committee for Ontario Creates. Over the course of these 100 issues, I have made numerous changes, all of which improved the physical and digital products for our customers, and the feedback and growth have been tremendous.

Without our readers, who are by far the most informed and passionate about the game we all love, there is no way that The Hockey News would have made it to my 100th issue as its publisher and owner. The print and digital platforms enjoy their dominance in the hockey-journalism space because our readers trust The Hockey News to be the independent voice of hockey around the world, and it is because of this that we continue to be the pinnacle of hockey content. I want to thank our readers for giving me the opportunity and wonderful experience of publishing my 100th issue and counting.

NO. 2: ALL TIME

SINCE 1947, THERE HAVE been a total of 19 publishers of The Hockey News during these past 77 years. When I acquired the magazine, I joined that list at the very bottom. As these past six-plus years, or eighty months, have passed, I have slowly climbed that list, passing other publishers, who have also passionately cared for The Hockey News, to where I now sit in the No. 2 all-time spot, second only to Ken McKenzie. That sounds crazy when I think of that.

In 2009, during the NHL's All-Star weekend, I went to The Hockey News' party in Ottawa with one goal in mind: to meet for the first time Caroline Andrews, the then publisher of The Hockey News. As the chairman of Bauer, I had been on the Top 100 People of Power list, so I knew many of the editorial staff, but I had never met the publisher.

After that first meeting in 2009, Caroline and I had become fast friends due to our hockey connection. In 2010, Caroline had arranged for The Hockey News to sponsor Team Canada in an international tournament in Belarus that I played in. After she left publishing to become a real estate agent, I hired her to sell my mother's home in 2022. Coincidentally, it was Caroline who I passed to become the No. 2 all-time publisher, relegating her to the No. 3 spot on the list. Sorry, Caroline.

I could have never dreamed as a young peewee player growing up in Montreal who devoured each and every issue of The Hockey News that someday I would become a veteran publisher of it. Growing up, Ken McKenzie was a superhero, a celebrity and the guy who seemed to know everyone in the hockey world. I remember seeing him speak at one of the many hockey banquets where he gave a speech to us hockey kids. It was electrifying. To think that I now follow him as the No. 2 on the list of all-time publishers is humbling. To take over that top spot on the list, I would have to remain as publisher until the age of 90, which I guarantee will not happen. Being as competitive as I am, this is the one time that I am thrilled to just be No. 2 all-time.

DREAM JOB

MY EXPERIENCE AS PUBLISHER OF THE HOCKEY NEWS IS ONE I'LL NEVER FORGET

BY CAROLINE ANDREWS

I REMEMBER THE DAY WHEN Transcontinental Media announced that it had purchased the magazine company Telemedia. My career dream was to work in the magazine industry.

I, along with my partners, sold my newspaper company to Transcontinental Media in 1997. I was then hired and promoted as publisher to run several newspapers in Ottawa. Transcontinental also acquired the Ottawa Business Journal. The OBJ had a stellar reputation in the city, so I was thrilled when it was added to my portfolio.

Could this be my path to the magazine industry? Not yet.

Transcontinental then bought the newspaper company Optipress. I was transferred to Nova Scotia to develop a turnaround strategy for 11 newspapers.

If I could prove myself, could this be my ticket to the magazine industry? I imagined publishing iconic brands: Style at Home, Canadian Living, Elle Canada.

After two years, I got the call. The VP of HR was flying into Halifax to meet with me to discuss a promotion to the magazine division. I remember her sharing how important a particular publication was to the founder of Transcontinental, as it was the first publication the company acquired, and he was a huge fan. She explained that the brand needed a significant revitalization plan, and I was chosen to be the new publisher. I was to move to Toronto the following month and become the publisher of The Hockey News brand.

The Hockey News! What?

Of course, I knew The Hockey News was part of the magazine division, but never in a million years did I ever think that was the brand I would be taking over.

The editors and writers are renowned in the hockey world. THN is the 'Bible of Hockey.' They've only had a few female employees in their then 60-year history. I'm coming in as the boss. Would I be accepted? I have never been so intimidated in my life.

Off to Toronto I went in the summer of 2007. My first meeting with the team was interesting. Everyone was polite. Everyone asked many questions about my hockey knowledge. Everyone was skeptical. I was honest and explained to the team that I was a huge fan but not a hockey expert. What I am is an expert in business, brands, publishing and understanding readers, operations and advertisers. You are all the hockey experts. "Let's elevate this brand to new heights together."

The following morning, one of those yellow and black "Hockey for Dummies" books was left anonymously on my desk. True story. I had my work cut out for me.

The fall of 2007 was going to be the 60th anniversary of The Hockey News. My plan was to relaunch The Hockey News in a big way to celebrate. I rolled up my sleeves, and the work began. I met with executives at the NHL in New York City to brainstorm. They were gracious with their time. I had to learn more about the business of hockey. I pored over past editions of THN. We did reader surveys and met with advertisers and suppliers to explain new concepts. We held many team meetings to discuss and tweak ideas.

By late summer, I was ready to present to the team. I wanted to transform The Hockey News from a newspaper to a glossy magazine. This move would attract more advertisers, readers and stand out on newsstands. I wanted more feature writing, a new design, contests, events, books and to expand THN.com and develop a mobile app. Oh, and we have only a few months to launch, as it must align with our 60th anniversary. My plan was to unveil the new magazine at an anniversary party in Toronto. The team was silent for a few minutes, and then the boardroom erupted with applause. Everyone was onboard and excited. We worked tirelessly to be ready for launch. In November, I was on stage at our launch party with Don Cherry, unveiling the giant cover of our first glossy magazine.

The new concepts were a hit. We attracted more advertisers and readers. Our books were best-sellers. THN mobile launched. THN.com expanded. During my many years with The Hockey News, I published 234 issues, a plethora of digital content and many books. I miss our healthy debates over covers, content and strategy. It was a privilege to collaborate with this extraordinary, talented team.

W. GRAEME ROUSTAN, CAROLINE ANDREWS & KERRY GOULET

About Caroline Andrews: The success of the THN relaunch earned Caroline a well-deserved promotion, and soon after, she became the VP & group publisher of all Transcontinental's English magazines. The Hockey News will always be her favorite brand. She moved back to Ottawa in 2019 and was hired by Engel & Volkers real-estate brokerage as director of operations. She now sells real estate full-time for Engel & Volkers and loves her new career path.

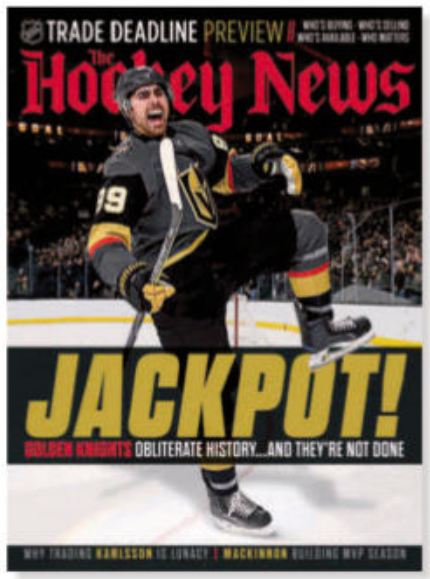
COVERS

1. 7403 - Walter Gretzky

On March 4, 2021, I was driving from Toronto on my way to see my mom in Carleton Place, Ont., when, on the radio, they broke into a song and announced that Walter Gretzky had passed away. I pulled off the highway and made a call to the then editor in chief to find out what the editorial plan was for this news. After some back-and-forth discussion, I ordered that the issue serve as a celebration of the life of Canada's hockey dad. We put Wayne Gretzky's father on the cover and produced a 16-page package honoring his life.

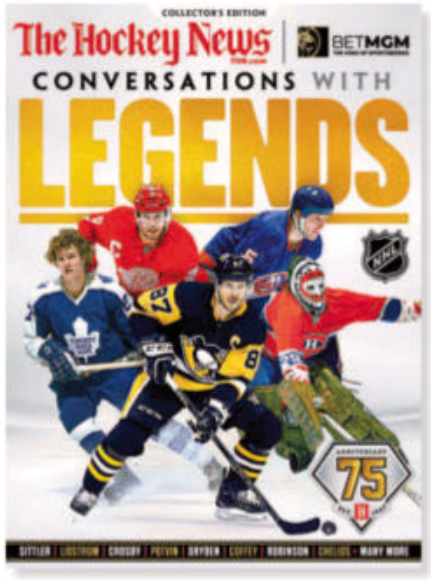


3. 7112 - My First Issue

This was the first issue that was published after I had acquired The Hockey News, and it featured a column by me coming in at a whopping 232 words and titled simply "A Letter From The Publisher." As a typical Canadian, I was never one for putting private family content out into the public domain before, but I decided to take the leap with a picture of me as a young boy and write about me and my brother when we were kids. What was supposed to be a one-time introductory piece as the new publisher became a regular column titled the "Publisher's Note," and now I struggle to keep it fewer than 1,000 words.

4. 7612 - 100 Classic Covers

Perhaps this is a sneaky way that I can add more covers to my top 5 by selecting the cover that contains 100 covers. Guilty as charged, but hear me out. I have loved The Hockey News since the early 1960s, and when I look back through the archive and see the thousands of covers that date back to 1947, I am overwhelmed with equal parts joy and fear that comes with being the steward of The Hockey News. The pressure to leave it to the next steward in better condition than how I received this honor is a responsibility I take to heart. Every time I see the 100 Classic Covers issue, it reminds me of the thousands of people who have worked on the thousands of issues since 1947. Try sleeping at night with that on your back.



5. 7603 - Legends

I grew up in Montreal loving hockey at all levels, but I especially loved the NHL, which was then based in Montreal. The Richard brothers, Gump Worsley, John Ferguson and Doug Harvey were all players who my dad knew and whom I met. Today, they and thousands of others are legends in the game of hockey. When my editorial team proposed a complete issue dedicated to interviews with some of the legends, I was all in, and it became a huge hit with our readers.

2. 2019 - Money & Power

An issue dedicated to the business of hockey is the task I put to my editorial team on Day 1 as new publisher. The cornerstone of this new dedicated business issue was to be the annual 100 People of Power and Influence list that The Hockey News launched in 2000. From there, I was going to use my business connections to bring to readers the off-ice information about the game they love. I asked Gary Bettman, Don Fehr and Rene Fasel to do the cover shot, and since then, the Money and Power issue has grown in popularity and size from 124 to 196 pages, and each edition features a spectacular gatefold cover.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS

1. Archive

Digitizing almost 3,000 issues dating back to 1947 is by far the biggest accomplishment during my time as publisher of these 100 issues. Not only was it a difficult process to navigate, but it was an important process for the history of the game of hockey. No other media company or even the NHL itself has the documented history of hockey like The Hockey News has in its possession. That is why anyone wanting to write an authentic book on any part of hockey history since 1947 smartly accesses our database for information. Our subscribers have access to the entire archive for free as part of their subscription.

CHALLENGES

1. Pandemic

March 12, 2020, was the day that Gary Bettman "paused" the NHL from playing any further games due to the coronavirus. From that date forward for two years, life was different for everyone around the world, and that included the hockey world. We all had to find ways to live, work and survive. The Hockey News business suffered financially since no hockey was being played. As its publisher and owner, the challenge was to make the tough decisions that had to be made to ensure its future, which was in jeopardy every single day. No one knows how close The Hockey News came to ceasing publication of print forever other than me, my accountant and my lawyer, both of whom advised me to shut it down for good. It was the darkest and most difficult time I had ever experienced in my entire business career.

2. Russian Invasion of Ukraine

On Feb. 24, 2022, Russia invaded Ukraine and began its killing spree that continues today. The IIHF and the NHL cut ties with Russia as governments from the free world instituted sanctions and businesses pulled out of Russia. As an individual with Ukrainian family ties, I too felt invaded. As chairman of Bauer, I travelled extensively in Russia. Over the years, I made friends with many Russian players and even played in the Russian Heroes Hockey Game in Red Square, where I was the only non-Russian individual in the game. That game preceded the first All-Star Game of the KHL, a league created by the Russian government to compete against the NHL. Those teams are each owned by Russian oligarchs hand-picked by Vladimir Putin, and by promoting the KHL, one is indirectly promoting the regime. As such, we now only cover the KHL in our Champions edition.

3. Growth Pains

Coming out of the pandemic in 2022, The Hockey News was as lean as it could be without compromising the quality of its print content, which has been at the core of the brand since 1947. We had made surgical cuts to our staff, and I challenged my remaining team to go above and beyond what they had ever done before to get us through the pandemic. They all stepped up. Post-pandemic, the challenge was to staff up. One by one, positions were filled, and when I saw the opportunity to launch 32 NHL-team websites and a dozen more dedicated themed sites in 2023, I went out and recruited the key people to fill the leadership and editorial positions. The Hockey News has now launched almost 50 new websites: one dedicated to each NHL team, women's hockey as well as a dozen more themed websites.

2. Print to Digital Transformation

In 2018, The Hockey News had a website where five or so stories a day would be posted. Today, The Hockey News has almost 50 websites under the main one, with more than 10 million pageviews per month. It's the norm that more than 100 stories are published for free every day. Transitioning The Hockey News brand from a print-dominated platform to the digital platform has occurred during these 100 issues, and now, more than 50 percent of our revenue comes from digital sources.

3. Physical Print Size and Quality

Going from 54 to a 116-page minimum size of issue was reached during these 100 issues under my stewardship. In addition, we have moved away from staples to hold most of the magazine issues together to perfect bound every single issue now, which improves the thud factor when dropping an issue on your desk or table. We have upgraded the quality of the paper inside the magazine as well as using thicker paper for the cover, which is now 100-pound paper with a UV coating. The Money and Power issue has a heavier gatefold cover and even heavier-quality paper that executives always take note of. Not only do I want readers to experience the increased content inside each issue, but I want them to get a workout when holding the issues in their hands.

4. Expanded Content

After a decade of cuts in staff, pages and content, The Hockey News content had declined right in front of readers' eyes. Over the past 100 issues, we have reversed the decline in the number of pages of content by widening the coverage of topics, specifically more coverage of women's hockey and the business of hockey. We went back to The Hockey News' roots of covering more leagues and international hockey but in more detail. For more than 60 years, I have known that The Hockey News can tell hockey stories better than any other publication, so let's widen the lens beyond the NHL and cover everything hockey.

5. Strategic Partnerships and Distribution

Being on a hockey team is very much like being on a business team in that you get to work with similar-minded people who have the same goal of winning. I have entered into strategic partnerships with other top-of-the-food-chain brands, including Yahoo, Apple, BetMGM, MSN, Upper Deck and many others who have recognized the authenticity and value of associating their brands with that of The Hockey News brand. Over these past 100 issues, we have consistently added strategic partners to grow with, which has taken our content to new highs around the world.

All in, since the end of the pandemic, we have added more than 100 professionals to The Hockey News team.

4. Customer Service

The Hockey News has outsourced all of its customer-service functions since before my stewardship, and it has been a challenge from Day 1 for me to find a path forward to make our customer service world-class. It has been the Achilles heel of The Hockey News and the one area where everyone tells me there is nothing I can do to fix it. As soon as I say that I want to terminate outsourcing it and bring it in-house, I'm told it would be an even bigger disaster. Being that I am often going against the grain, I made the decision to bring all customer service operations in-house by the fall of 2024. It reminds me of 2018, when I acquired a print magazine, and everyone was telling me I couldn't make it work. Well, I did make it work, and I will make customer service for our subscribers work much better than it has been during these first 100 issues.

5. Cost Containment

Print, postage and people costs are the three P's in the downfall of all magazines. As the owner of The Hockey News, I would make a great deal of money if I just eliminated all print magazines and just went all digital all the time. I am constantly asked by other magazine publishers and even my own accountant why I keep the print version of The Hockey News alive when it would financially benefit me not to do so. Paper and print costs have doubled since the pandemic, and as you might know, prices go up fast but never seem to come back down. Canada Post and the USPS are used to send our subscribers their copies, but once or twice a year, we get postal-rate increases. As for people, costs continue to go up. Eventually, if print, postage and people costs continue to increase at rates above what people are willing to pay for a subscription, the challenge will be to maintain a print magazine. But I will do everything in my power to ensure we do.

TOP 5
PUBLISHER'S NOTES

1. 7513 - Ivy's Son

I wrote this Publisher's Note in the difficult hours after my mom took her last breath as I sat by her side in the Carleton Place hospital. Throughout my life, and too often to count, I had always been referred to as 'Ivy's son,' just as I had during these final days by the nursing staff. After wearing many titles over the years, the one that best defines and suits me as a person is that of Ivy's son. I shared this with all of my readers because had it not been for Ivy's encouragement, advice and support, I would have never taken on the risk of buying a print magazine scheduled to be shut down in the digital media age. Ivy is the main reason that you and millions of people around the world are able to read The Hockey News today.

2. 7403 - Wally, Wally, Wayne & Wayne by Walter

The Walter Gretzky tribute issue is my favorite cover and issue of my first 100 issues by far. This was the first time I stepped in and asserted my ownership to set the editorial direction of any issue. The issue was about the most difficult issue that we all unfortunately have to deal with at some point in our lives: the death of a parent. If you are in the hockey world, then you have some connection to the Gretzky family, even if you might not be aware of it. In Canada, there were many families like the Gretzkys, and even if I had never met Walter and Wayne, in my Publisher's Note, I pointed out some of the similarities our families had just to add a lighter note to the seriousness of the subject matter.

3. 7215 - Watching The Greatest Team of All-Time

For four days, starting on April 26, 2019, I sat at my mother's bedside in the Ottawa General Hospital, watching the healthcare team take care of my mother after she had broken her hip. This team of professionals worked seamlessly together in a choreographed way that was unlike anything I had ever seen before. The way they worked together with the goal of providing my mom with the greatest care possible was eye-opening. I had played on several great teams in many sports and in business, but I realized after spending those four days there I had witnessed greatness, and I am forever in their debt.

4. 7601 - A New Editor in Chief

The 75th anything is a milestone in anyone's life or in any business. Reaching this milestone is alone an accomplishment, but to be alive and relevant at the same time means there is a formula for success at play. I believe that in order to extend life, be it personal or business, one must continue to grow in an open and unbiased way. In 2022, I took the occasion of the 75th anniversary of The Hockey News' first issue back in 1947 to name its next editor in chief, Ryan Kennedy. I wrote in this edition of my Publisher's Note that since I had acquired the publication, I had made several changes on both the business and editorial side to grow the title, both popular and unpopular. My naming a new editor in chief who understood my vision was imperative and indicative of all of the changes as I plan toward the 100th anniversary in 2047.

5. 7306 - We Are One Big Family

Phil Hoffman was a typical subscriber of The Hockey News – "passionate" is the positive spin I like to use. He was irate that an issue of his subscription had not reached him in 2018, and he wanted to speak with the owner. I think I actually shocked him when I reached out to him and personally resolved his issue. We immediately hit it off as we found something in common we love: The Hockey News. On March 31, 2020, he passed away as one of the victims of the COVID-19 pandemic. I reached out to his wife, Eileen, and we had a few calls leading up to my Publisher's Note that we published on Phil and his life and love of hockey. The Hockey News lost a subscriber, but I had lost a new friend.

ISSUE 101 & BEYOND

AS OF THIS ISSUE, I am now the second-longest-serving publisher of The Hockey News. I take great pride in saying that. It is an honor to be at the helm of this organization that is steeped in history while having the brightest of futures.

I am hard at work growing the business, extending The Hockey News brand across more platforms and with other strategic partners. I am focused on our 100th anniversary, which will take place in 2047, and as the cornerstone of that build, I have put in place a young enough team to get us to that remarkable mountaintop.

My No. 1 responsibility is to prepare the brand for the next publisher, its 20th, by handing it off in a better condition than I received it in. So far, the readers have spoken, and they approve of my vision wholeheartedly by subscribing and consuming our content on all platforms.

During these 100 issues, I have transformed from a rookie to become a veteran publisher. I have had some accomplishments as well as challenges along the way, but it has been a great journey. I owe a great deal of thanks to all of my teammates at The Hockey News, you, the readers, for supporting my vision and to my mom, Ivy, for everything that I have and everything that I am. H

10 THINGS TO WATCH

After wandering in the desert for years, the Utah Hockey Club has a new home and new hope.

A FLORIDA MAN NAMED STANLEY. WILL THAT BE TRENDING AGAIN IN 2025? THAT'S JUST ONE OF MANY HEADLINES TO KEEP AN EYE ON THIS SEASON

BY KEN CAMPBELL

BY THE TIME THE 2024-25 season starts, perhaps the Florida Panthers will have recovered from the hangover. Not the Stanley Cup hangover – the actual one that comes with the pounding head and the nausea and the vowing to never, ever drink again. Maybe by that time, the good people of South Florida will stop looking at them funny as they stand shirtless on the side of the road holding up a big, shiny trophy.

The Panthers celebrated their first championship in franchise history with gusto, to be sure. Their coach, Paul Maurice, was both magnificently articulate and incredibly profane. It was glorious. Whether the Panthers can keep Stanley a Florida Man for the fourth time in six years will come down to whether or not their core, which they did an admirable job of keeping together, will continue to have a Tomas Nosek for the net and play hard to the last Mackenzie Entwistle.

The Panthers and their pursuit of another Stanley Cup, playing in the murderer's row known as the Atlantic Division – with a Cup finalist in each of the past six seasons – is just one of the storylines to follow this year. Here are 10 others:

1. ARE WE THERE YETI?

They left the desert and became a team with no name, but the Utah Hockey Club has an awful lot going for it. All it took was a move about 700 miles due north and a credible owner in tech billionaire Ryan Smith. Are the former Arizona Coyotes primed to become the Colorado Avalanche 2.0? OK, nobody is expecting a Stanley Cup in Year 1 after the move, something the Avs did the year after they relocated to Denver from Quebec City in 1996. But Utah is using its newfound wealth to supplement a lineup that looks ready to turn the corner to become a contender.

ALEX OVECHKIN

2. THE GR8 CHASE

When he came out of the gate with just eight goals in 43 games last season, it looked like Alex Ovechkin might not catch Wayne Gretzky's all-time record of 894 goals after all. But with 23 in his final 36 games, Ovechkin put himself in a position to break the mark soon. It would take a 42-goal season in 2024-25, something the 39-year-old did just two years ago. And with the Capitals trying to rebuild on the fly, Ovechkin will have more help in his quest than last season.

4. THE MILLION-DOLLAR 'Q'UESTION

Having been reinstated on July 1, the opening day of free agency, Joel Quenneville immediately goes to the top of the list of NHL coaches-in-waiting, right? If it were based solely on quality and resume, Quenneville would indeed be fielding calls as soon as a couple of teams start badly. But is there a franchise that will be prepared to face the inevitable backlash and public-relations problem that will come with hiring Quenneville, who was part of the inner circle when the Chicago Blackhawks abdicated their duty to report a sexual assault in 2010? Chances are, there will be. Because hockey. After all, Stan Bowman was named GM of the Oilers in July.

JOEL QUENNEVILLE

JAMES HAGENS

5. HAGENS DOES

It's never too early to start rating prospects, so James Hagens, formerly of the USA Hockey's National Team Development Program, is the way-too-early front-runner to go No. 1 overall at the 2025 NHL draft. The Boston College freshman will get some competition from the likes of Anton Frondell of Djurgarden (Swe.), Porter Martone of OHL Brampton and Michael Misa of OHL Saginaw. And, of course, we'll also be keeping an eye on 16-year-old phenom Gavin McKenna, who scored 97 points for WHL Medicine Hat last season and is the way-way-too-early front-runner to go No. 1 overall in 2026.

MATVEI MICHKOV

3. THE CASHVILLE PREDATORS

In his first stab at free agency in 2023, rookie Nashville GM Barry Trotz made a few interesting tweaks. But in Year 2, Trotz went full-on cowboy, handing out more than $170 million in contracts to newcomers Steven Stamkos, Jonathan Marchessault and Brady Skjei, while extending goalie Juuse Saros for eight years beyond this season, all on the first day of free agency in 2024. With Cup winners Stamkos, Marchessault and Ryan O'Reilly leading the way, the Preds put what looked like a rebuild on steroids and pushed it right into a contention window.

BARRY TROTZ

6. ROLL OUT THE WELCOME MATVEI

First, the supremely talented Matvei Michkov fell into the Philadelphia Flyers' laps at the 2023 draft when they got him with the seventh-overall pick. Though the Flyers expected Michkov to not be available until 2026-27, St. Petersburg released him from his KHL commitment two years early. Sounds strange, but the Flyers will take it. And just like last season, when Connor Bedard was the Calder Trophy odds-on favorite to start the year, the player drafted six spots after him will enter 2024-25 with the same expectation.

This season will see a best-on-best men's tourney for the first time since the 2016 World Cup of Hockey.

7. NHL/NHLPA INVITATIONAL

Hey, we're all for anything that replaces the NHL All-Star Game, so go 4 Nations Face-Off! (And as a fringe benefit, Nikita Kucherov won't be there acting like somebody just peed in his Corn Flakes.) You're probably not surprised to hear that it will be a four-team tournament involving four nations – Canada, the United States, Sweden and Finland – held in Boston and Montreal from Feb. 12-20, 2025. It won't have anywhere near the intrigue of other international best-on-best events, but it will provide an interesting prequel to the 2026 Olympics. The NHL's really, really going for reals this time, right?

MITCH MARNER

8. BORN TO BE FREE

It seems like we say this almost every year, but have you checked out the free-agent class for the summer of 2025? Some of those players will be signed during the season or before July 1, but there are some situations – such as Leon Draisaitl's in Edmonton and Mitch Marner's in Toronto – that will be fascinating to watch unfold. Add in the likes of Brock Boeser in Vancouver, Igor Shesterkin with the Rangers and Aaron Ekblad in Florida and you've got yourself a boffo UFA class right there.

LEON DRAISAITL

9. RULES RULE, MAN

Because there are clearly not enough times when the officials have to huddle over an iPad, the league will now allow a coach's challenge on puck-over-the-glass calls. It will only be to determine whether the puck deflected off a player, stick, the glass or the boards and not on how the puck left the defensive zone…zzzz…wait, what? And be warned, NHLers, no more sitting on the boards with one leg hanging over during play. We know you're as eager as an under-10 puck hog to get out there and have fun with your friends, but now you'll get a warning, followed by a bench penalty. For not staying on the bench.

10. SPHERE, THERE OR ANYWHERE?

When the 2024 draft wrapped up, NHL deputy commissioner Bill Daly hinted that maybe, just maybe, the league might not go ahead with a decentralized draft as was planned after all. That would have everything to do with the spectacle created at The Sphere in Vegas, which received rave reviews, both from those in attendance and those who watched on television. But as long as the NHL is going to jam so many important dates together, having a decentralized draft makes more sense from a practical perspective.

ROOKIE REPORT

MATVEI MICHKOV

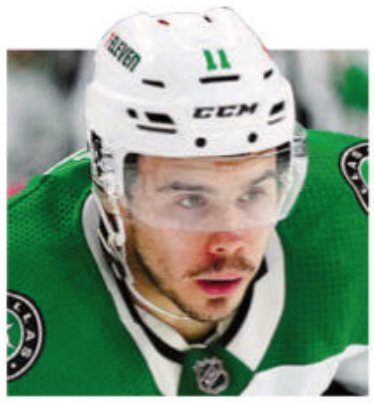
THE NEXT WAVE OF NHL FRESHMEN FEATURES DAZZLING TALENT UP FRONT AND A COUPLE OF GREAT GOALIES, TOO

BY RYAN KENNEDY

THE NHL'S 2024-25 rookie class will be a mature one. We expect some fun things from Macklin Celebrini, but the No. 1 pick is the only lock from the 2024 draft class to go straight to The Show. A defenseman such as Artyom Levshunov or Sam Dickinson could break the mold, but it's more likely we see them in 2025-26.

Most of the 10 players on these pages have already seen some NHL action but not enough to squash their Calder Trophy eligibility. To that end, we've omitted impressive youngsters such as Simon Edvinsson (Detroit), Brandt Clarke (Los Angeles) and David Jiricek (Columbus), as they'll officially enter 2024-25 as NHL sophomores, based on the Calder's games-played rule.

There will be some great opportunities for the promising freshmen players on this list, many of whom play for rebuilding organizations that need guys who can come in and seize a role. In some cases, that might even be a plum spot in net.



LOGAN STANKOVEN C, DAL

THE RELENTLESS MOTOR AND high-end skill put Stankoven on the fast track in Dallas, where the diminutive dynamo made a quick impression last season. Stankoven earned a roster spot in the playoffs and tied for sixth in Stars' post-season scoring with eight points in 19 games. He also won 53.9 percent of his faceoffs. With 24 games of service in the regular season, Stankoven barely qualifies for the Calder – but he's in the race. On a team with Stanley Cup talent, Stankoven has the chance to make even more of an impact this season.

MATVEI MICHKOV RW, PHI

ONE OF THE MOST dynamic and offensively lethal prospects to come around in years, Michkov had been in a bit of Russian purgatory since the Flyers drafted him. Instead of playing for powerhouse SKA-St. Petersburg, the team loaned him to bottom-feeder Sochi. Nonetheless, Michkov arrives in North America with a ton of hype – and it's very much warranted. Let's not forget, he went toe-to-toe with Connor Bedard at the 2021 world under-18s, putting up 16 points to Bedard's 14. And though Canada won gold over Russia, Michkov was named tournament MVP and got revenge with a title at the Hlinka Gretzky tourney that summer.

WILL SMITH C, SJ

AFTER A SMASHING FRESHMAN season at Boston College, the No. 4 pick in 2023 decided to sign his entry-level contract with the Sharks, and why not? Smith put up an incredible 71 points in 41 games for the NCAA's Eagles, helping them get to the national championship game before falling to Denver. He also won gold with Team USA at the world juniors, playing on the same line he did at BC, with Ryan Leonard (Washington) and Gabe Perreault (New York Rangers) on his wings. Smith is an excellent playmaker with a high hockey IQ, and on a San Jose team in need of talent, the teenager fits the bill.

ROOKIE REPORT

MACKLIN CELEBRINI C, SJ

THE YOUNGEST HOBEY BAKER Award winner ever, Celebrini was 17 for his entire freshman season with Boston University, helping the Terriers to the Frozen Four semifinal. His statline of 64 points in 38 games was impressive enough, but Celebrini has the dogged compete level and commitment away from the puck to be a trusted entity in the NHL immediately. There's a reason he went first overall in the 2024 draft. He has already proven that age means nothing to him, and with Will Smith also in the fold in San Jose, the Sharks have an incredible 1-2 punch developing down the middle.

JESPER WALLSTEDT G, MIN

HIS NHL DEBUT DIDN'T go so well – he let in seven goals on 34 shots – but Wallstedt ended the year on a positive note, shutting out Chicago and then earning his second NHL win over San Jose. He's been on the radar for several years, and like most goalies, he had to develop at the proper pace. But the time to see more of Wallstedt is now, with 39-year-old Marc-Andre Fleury entering his final NHL season. Wallstedt has Filip Gustavsson ahead of him, too, but the younger goalie has the size and athleticism to be the No. 1 in Minnesota soon.

IVAN MIROSHNICHENKO LW, WSH

HIS BATTLE WITH HODGKIN'S lymphoma was harrowing, but Miroshnichenko got through the ordeal. Now, he's on the upward swing in Washington. Physical and offensively gifted, the Russian left winger has a great role model in town in captain Alex Ovechkin, plus the chance to impact an aging team that needs an injection of youth to turn things around. Miroshnichenko got his feet wet with 21 NHL games last season, putting up a modest six points. But he found more success and gained great pro experience with AHL Hershey as part of the team's run to the Calder Cup championship.

YAROSLAV ASKAROV G, NSH

DURING HIS TIME WITH AHL Milwaukee, Askarov delighted his teammates with his bold moves in net – and sometimes nowhere near the net. They called it 'Rock Star Mode' when Askarov would make an unorthodox move, and while his coaches sometimes grimaced, they never tried to change the 6-foot-4, 187-pound stopper. Why bother? Askarov's size and quickness make him an ideal NHL goalie, and he has a great mentor in Nashville in starter Juuse Saros. In two appearances with the Predators last year, Askarov rocked a .943 save percentage.

JIRI KULICH C, BUF

THE SABRES HAVE SEVERAL impressive young players who will be vying for roster spots and some, such as Zach Benson and Jack Quinn, who are there already. Kulich will have to fend off Buffalo's other top prospects if he wants a full-time job, but that's precisely the kind of internal competition the Sabres need in order to climb into a playoff spot. Kulich was a monster for Czechia's bronze-medal team at the world juniors, especially in a shocking playoff win over Finland. The sharpshooter made the WJC all-star team and also played in the AHL all-star festivities thanks to his exemplary work in Rochester.

CUTTER GAUTHIER C, ANA

HIS TRADE FROM PHILADELPHIA to Anaheim was controversial – and no doubt Flyers fans will let him know how they feel the first time he comes to town – but there's no denying the skills Gauthier brings to the table. He was a Hobey Baker finalist, helped Boston College make it to the NCAA final and won a gold medal at the WJC with Team USA. Gauthier is a big, mobile center who can kill penalties and also owns a wicked shot. He played a bit at left wing for the U.S. NTDP prior to college, so the Ducks could shift him over if needed.

DENTON MATEYCHUK D, CLB

WHILE HIS MOOSE JAW Warriors didn't win the Memorial Cup, Mateychuk ended last season on a high note thanks to his strong showing in the playoffs, which included a WHL championship. The mobile blueliner was named WHL defenseman of the year and playoff MVP after posting 30 points in 20 games (including a league-best 19 assists). Mateychuk will have to earn his spot on the Columbus blueline, and big David Jiricek will be another top youngster looking for minutes. But that's a great problem for the Blue Jackets to have, since a talent-rich D-corps will go a long way in helping the team get back in the hunt.

C | Edmonton Oilers

NOT THAT THERE WAS EVER ANY DOUBT, BUT CONNOR MCDAVID'S PROLIFIC PLAYOFF PERFORMANCE MAKES IT ABUNDANTLY CLEAR: HE'S THE NO. 1 PLAYER IN THE NHL, AND HE'S ONLY GETTING BETTER

BY RYAN KENNEDY

MEDIA DAY AT THE Stanley Cup final is a a many-splendored thing. Hordes of reporters from across the world converge to bring coverage to the masses, and said reporters come from a wide variety of backgrounds. There are, of course, the beat writers and international pros who already know these players inside out, but there are also the local TV stations helping out bandwagon fans in the home markets. After that, you get the randoms – celebrity websites and the like who need their content as well, even if they don't really have any particular tie to hockey.

This is how Edmonton Oilers captain Connor McDavid ended up facing the following question from an earnest and well-meaning reporter: "What is 'Hollywood' about you?" To which the eternally humble superstar replied, "What's Hollywood about me? Not much. Not much at all. I'm just a normal Canadian kid."

A response that is partially true. On the surface, McDavid is indeed a pretty well-adjusted young man from the northern suburbs of Toronto. But while he'd never admit it in public, he also happens to be the best hockey player in the world right now. And he was a major reason why the Oilers nearly pulled off one of the greatest comebacks in Stanley Cup history.

The weight placed on McDavid's shoulders has been there since before he had any shoulders to speak of. His phenom abilities put him on the mainstream hockey radar when he was just 14, and he hasn't disappointed on the ice since.

In terms of mainstream fame, McDavid was a smash hit in the OHL, where he joined the Erie Otters a year early after being granted exceptional status. Erie was also where he met Kris Knoblauch, now his coach in Edmonton, and Connor Brown, now an Oilers teammate. "He was an unbelievable player," Brown said. "A young, awkward kid, but a great kid with a great attitude day-in, day-out at the rink. Always an incredibly hard worker. I learned a lot from him even though he was younger than me and I was the captain. We all liked being on his team and the atmosphere he cultivated."

In 2015, Edmonton won the No. 1 selection in the draft, and McDavid was the prize. Having added Leon Draisaitl and Darnell Nurse in previous drafts, the Oilers once again set out to make things right in the City of Champions after years of futility.

The process was slow – the Oilers won just a single playoff series in McDavid's first six seasons, missing the spring dance three times – but in McDavid and Draisaitl, the franchise had two of the planet's most devastating centers coming into their own. The fact McDavid had Draisaitl with him took some of the pressure off, too. "He's such a great player," McDavid said. "It's so fun to be on the ice with him. Away from the rink, our relationship continues to get closer and closer. He's a great dude. People may not know it, but he's hilarious, and I feel really lucky to have been his teammate for so long."

CONNOR McDAVID

Nurse is another player who has grown up in the NHL with McDavid and Draisaitl – the three have hung out for years – and helping the Oilers get back to contender status has been incredibly satisfying for the big defenseman. "It's been a heckuva ride," Nurse said. "I've enjoyed the highs, the lows and everything that has come along with it that has allowed me to grow as a player and a person. It's one of the coolest jobs and one of the best things to do in a lifetime. For me, it was our group getting back to the playoffs multiple times. We've had a few cracks at long playoff runs, but there's been no satisfaction."

In the past few years, however, McDavid and the Oilers have made progress. Those deep runs indicated the team was learning lessons, and McDavid and Draisaitl continued to tear up NHL stat sheets. The excellence was obvious for those who played against them in the past. "When those guys came in, the Oilers weren't in a great spot," said Corey Perry, who joined the team midway through last season and has re-upped for 2024-25. "They got into a great spot once they got them and could build around them. Those two guys lead by example on and off the ice. The team rallies around those guys, and at the peaks of their careers, they're special players."

Across the past three regular seasons, McDavid put up a stunning total of 408 points – including 64 goals and 153 points in 2022-23, when he won the Hart, Art Ross, Rocket Richard and Ted Lindsay in the process. Draisaitl put up 344 points in the same span, including two seasons with more than 50 goals.

Back in the day, Perry was part of his own young dynamic duo in Anaheim, where he and Ryan Getzlaf ruled the roost (Perry won the Hart and Rocket Richard with the Ducks in 2010-11). So, he comes from a place of experience when he marvels at what his current teammates have been able to do. "It's a lot of pressure on your shoulders, but pressure is a good thing and a privilege," Perry said. "It just made us better players and people. To play against Connor and Leon for so many years, then come into Edmonton and see how they are and what they do on a daily basis, you can see why the team sticks around them."

Which became acutely important at the beginning of 2023-24. The Oilers struggled

> "IT'S BEEN A GREAT JOURNEY FROM BEING THAT YOUNG KID TO BEING IN THIS POSITION NOW

out of the gates last season, going 3-9-1, which resulted in the firing of coach Jay Woodcroft. Knoblauch came in at a time when only the San Jose Sharks had a worse record and things seemed bleak for an Oilers team that, on paper, looked like a Cup contender. "We were definitely in the weeds there for a bit," said former Oiler Ryan McLeod. "It was frustrating. Everyone was really emotional and upset, but we grew stronger. We had that resilience."

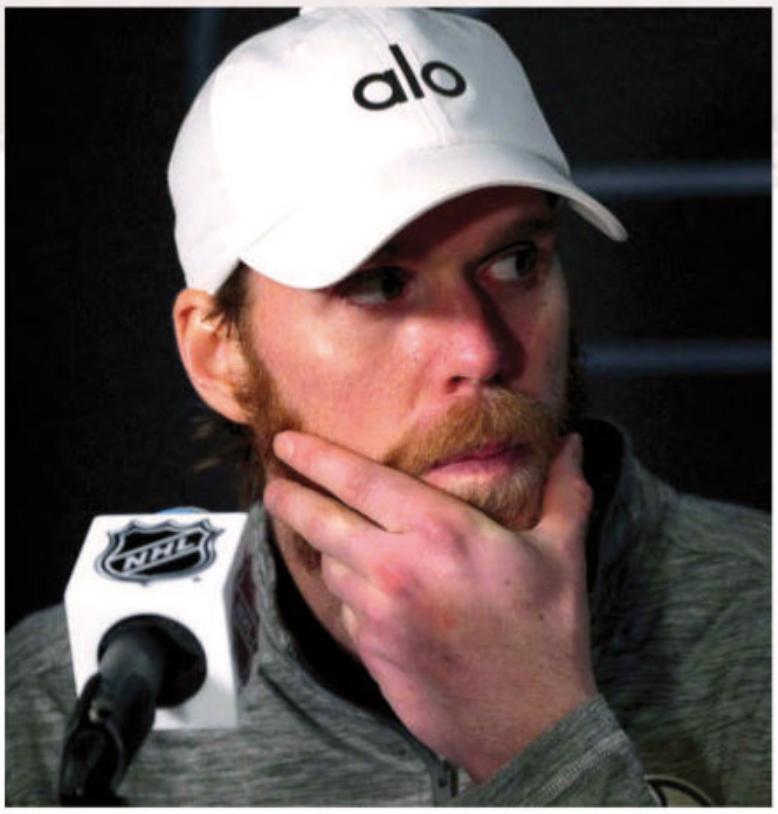
There was also belief from the captain. "Our group always believed we were a good team, even when things weren't going well," McDavid said. "We always believed that if we stuck with it, things would turn around. When you're going through it, obviously it sucks and doesn't feel like that, but we came together. It was good for our group to go through that so early on. It showed we could go through adversity together and stick together and come out the other side."

No. 97 passes No. 99: McDavid broke Gretzky's record for most assists in a single playoff this spring.

Knoblauch brought more of a defensive structure to the team, and the Oilers gained steam. Just before Christmas, they kicked off a 16-game winning streak, which tied for the second-longest run in NHL history. McDavid, who looked a little hobbled for a few games early, returned to destroying the opposition with his speed, skill and vision. Cup or bust? Yeah, it felt that way. "He came into the season with that mentality, and so did this whole team," Brown said. "Through the start of the season, that kind of weight we were playing with, we realized we had to shed that weight to play at our best, and as a group, we all learned that."

By the time the playoffs rolled around, the Oilers looked like the team we all expected

SERGEI BELSKI-USA TODAY SPORTS



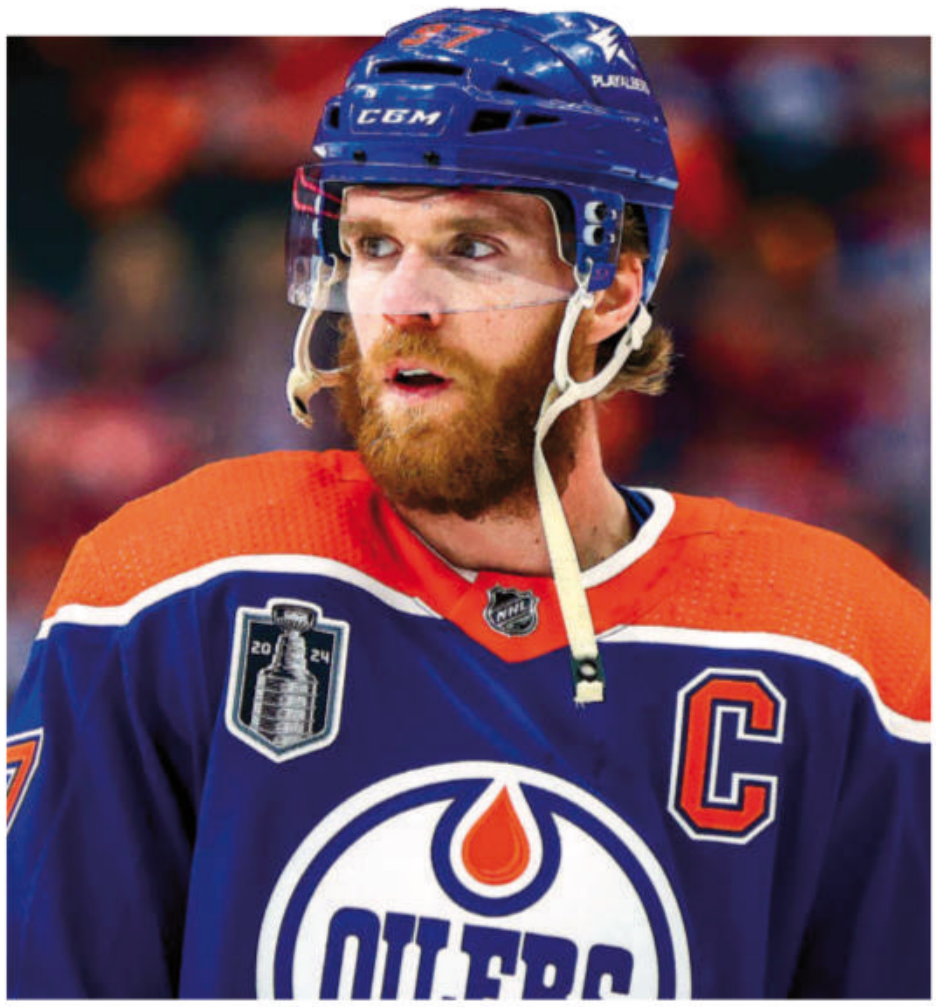
McDavid has been more vocal in recent years, calling out the NHL on issues such as Olympic participation.

them to be. Sure, there was a question of whether third-year goalie Stuart Skinner was the answer in net (spoiler alert: he was), but after Edmonton easily dispatched the Los Angeles Kings in the first round, it felt like something might be there. The rival Vancouver Canucks put up a valiant fight, but without starting goalie Thatcher Demko, the Canucks could only do so much. The Dallas Stars then proved to be a good precursor to the Panthers with their combination of structure and skill, but, again, the Oilers prevailed. Even after being limited by Florida's defense through the first three games of the Cup final, McDavid ended up breaking Wayne Gretzky's record for most assists in a post-season when No. 97 rang up his 32nd helper in a Game 4 blowout. He finished the playoffs with 34 assists and the Conn Smythe Trophy, despite Edmonton losing to Florida in seven games.

Not that McDavid would ever lobby for himself. Even in breaking Gretzky's record, he was muted in his response, citing the pursuit of a championship as his bigger motivation. "It's not lost on me, what he means to the game," McDavid said. "But it's not my focus."

For years, the only thing harder than stopping McDavid on the ice was getting him to say something in front of a microphone. It's understandable that someone who has been on camera since he was a young teen would be reticent to make waves, especially in a sport where tradition dictates that the individual always takes a backseat to the team. When McDavid burst onto the NHL scene, he was indeed seen as 'The Chosen One' in Edmonton and a generational player the likes of which had not been seen since the Pittsburgh Penguins drafted Sidney Crosby first overall a decade prior. And yes, Crosby and Washington's Alex Ovechkin were still the faces of the league as McDavid came up – but neither played in Canada, did they?

So, we didn't hear much from McDavid in the first half of his NHL career, but, slowly, he began to raise his voice. He was disappointed when the league didn't release players to the 2022 Winter Olympics, and he did not hide his displeasure. When it was revealed that the league had banned Pride-themed warm-up jerseys at the end of 2022-23, McDavid called the decision "disappointing" and proudly noted that the Oilers were among the first NHL teams to use Pride tape.



Now firmly ensconced at the top of the hockey world, he was making his opinions known. "He's matured a ton," Brown said. "When you're put through the gauntlet like he has, playing in Canada, being the best player in the world, you have no choice but to mature. He's very mature and dedicated. But there are a lot of things that I see in him from when he was young: the love for the game, the pace he plays with, the mindset. With anything comes growth, and even this year, there's been a lot of growth."

Whether he likes it or not, McDavid is the face of the NHL. Sure, Crosby is still a great player, and Ovechkin may break Gretzky's all-time goals record this season, but McDavid is the central player now. Auston Matthews is a great personality in the major media market of Toronto, but his impact comes more in growing the game and making hockey look hip. Nathan MacKinnon and Jack Hughes have the skill and personality to be focal points, but they play in Denver and Newark – not Canada, where the mania for hockey is year-round.

So, how does McDavid deal with the spotlight? "I wish there was some great answer, but you just get used to it," he said. "You get used to being that guy and doing more media, but it's been a great journey from being that young kid to being in this position now."

At the same time, McDavid's leadership within the Oilers' dressing room has grown as well. "He definitely has some personality, for sure," Brown said. "He's not always business-like. He's a great leader and cultivates a great atmosphere in the room. He truly has come into his own as a great captain. He's a lead-by-example guy, and this is just the start for him."

Perhaps it's fitting, then, that when the Oilers needed him the most, McDavid was there for them. After being slowed down in the first three games of the Cup final by Selke Trophy-winning center Aleksander Barkov and the Panthers' top defense pairing of Aaron Ekblad and Gustav Forsling, McDavid finally shook loose in Game 4, rattling off four points in an 8-1 drubbing of Florida. Facing elimination again in Game 5, he returned with another four points, and, all of a sudden, the series got real. "He's the face of this comeback for us," said Oilers right winger Mattias Janmark at the time. "He pulled the whole group back into the series."

Ultimately, the Panthers took the Cup in seven, which was a crushing disappointment for Edmonton. But with McDavid leading the way, the Oilers will again be in the thick of the title hunt this season.

TOP 50 PLAYERS IN THE NHL

LEON DRAISAITL

2. NATHAN MACKINNON
C | Colorado Avalanche

Consider this: MacKinnon won his first Hart Trophy last season and did so during a campaign where he only had running mate Valeri Nichushkin part time and the Avs were once again missing captain Gabriel Landeskog. And yet 'Nate Dogg' put up career numbers, powering Colorado with his first 50-goal season – 51 to be precise – and a staggering 140 points. Were it not for Connor McDavid's Conn Smythe Trophy-winning performance in the playoffs, MacKinnon easily could've been No. 1 on our list. In the meantime, the goal is always the same: bring another championship to Denver.

3. LEON DRAISAITL
C | Edmonton Oilers

Perhaps the scariest thing about Draisaitl is he really hasn't been at full power during Edmonton's past three playoff runs. And yet, he was still one of the highest-scoring players in the field. Injuries to Draisaitl's hand and ribs had Oilers trainers marvelling that he was even on the ice during the Stanley Cup final, but the greatest German player in NHL history pushed through. At his apex, Draisaitl is a powerful center with incredible vision who's a dual threat to shoot or dish on Edmonton's lethal power play. He has surpassed 100 points in three straight seasons and will surely do it again this year.

4. CALE MAKAR
D | Colorado Avalanche

Simply put, Makar is what every team is looking for in a franchise defenseman. He's a gifted puck-mover who can quarterback a power play, eat big minutes and defend with his stick. Makar is the gold standard right now and a perennial Norris Trophy contender. Had he not missed five games last season, he likely would've been the top-scoring blueliner in the league (Quinn Hughes took the honor instead), but Makar will inevitably be back in the mix again – and he has many prime years left. Makar will undoubtedly be plenty motivated this season as he seeks his second Cup ring.

5. ALEKSANDER BARKOV
C | Florida Panthers

Captain of the Stanley Cup champions, Barkov was a strong candidate to win the Conn Smythe Trophy that ultimately went to his final foe, McDavid. There was a fierce battle in the final between the two, with Barkov containing the Oilers' No. 97 just enough in the seven-game series to help the Panthers win their first title. Barkov is a dominant two-way center who finally got the big spotlight he deserved last season. Not only did he win the Cup, but he also took home his second career Selke Trophy. You can count on him to be more than a point-per-game player while stifling opponents with his penalty-kill prowess.

6. NIKITA KUCHEROV
RW | Tampa Bay Lightning

The times are changing in Tampa Bay, and with Steven Stamkos gone, the focus will be heavy on Kucherov up front. 'Kuch' is coming off a campaign where he led the NHL in scoring with a ridiculous 144 points, so maybe we shouldn't be concerned. He got a lot of Hart Trophy love, finishing second in voting to MacKinnon, and the case for the Lightning star was solid: not only did Kucherov put up 100 assists (only the fifth player in history to do so), but Tampa Bay's next-highest scorer was Brayden Point with 90 points – a full 54 points back. Are the Bolts still a threat? Ask Kucherov.

7. AUSTON MATTHEWS
C | Toronto Maple Leafs

He came oh-so-close to becoming the ninth NHL player to score 70 goals. Does anyone doubt he could hit that mark this season with his deceptive release? Matthews' two-way game is pretty hot, too.

8. DAVID PASTRNAK
RW | Boston Bruins

With no elite centers to play with anymore, Pastrnak still went out and took care of business as usual as one of the NHL's leading scorers. He also put another playoff dagger into the rival Leafs.

PERRY NELSON-USA TODAY SPORTS

9. QUINN HUGHES
D | Vancouver Canucks

A well-earned first Norris Trophy is on Hughes' mantle as he cements his place among the NHL's elite tier of defensemen. His skating and puck play have always been strengths, and now, he's at full power.

10. ARTEMI PANARIN
LW | New York Rangers

Think about where Alexis Lafreniere was before and after he joined Panarin's line, and you'll see Panarin's impact. He was a legit Hart Trophy candidate for the league's top regular-season team.

11. CONNOR HELLEBUYCK
G | Winnipeg Jets

Hellebuyck was the runaway winner of the Vezina Trophy, and for good reason. His goals saved above expected of 33.1 was 11 better than second-place Thatcher Demko, according to moneypuck.com.

12. ADAM FOX
D | New York Rangers

He looked hobbled in the playoffs, but make no mistake: when Fox is healthy, he's still one of the best blueliners in the league. His smarts are off the charts, and he puts up a ton of points.

13. IGOR SHESTERKIN
G | New York Rangers

While he took his lumps early in the season, Shesterkin was back in fine form by the end of the year and remains one of the NHL's premier netminders. He actually improved his advanced stats in the playoffs.

14. SIDNEY CROSBY
C | Pittsburgh Penguins

Are the Penguins a playoff team anymore? Not likely. Is Crosby still one of the best two-way players in the game? Yes. Is he one of the top five players of all-time? It's an easy argument to make now.

15. THATCHER DEMKO
G | Vancouver Canucks

Would the Canucks have advanced to the Stanley Cup final instead of the Oilers if Demko was healthy in the playoffs? It's a big "what if," but he is a difference-maker as one of the NHL's best netminders right now.

16. MIKKO RANTANEN
RW | Colorado Avalanche

He sometimes gets lost in the shuffle thanks to Avs superstars MacKinnon and Makar, but don't forget about the incredible Rantanen. The big-bodied scorer has broken 100 points in back-to-back campaigns.

17. JACK HUGHES
C | New Jersey Devils

When he's healthy, he's a phenom, and we saw the upside in 2022-23. With a better supporting cast this season, expect the elusive (and healed) Hughes to put up some boffo offensive numbers.

18. ROMAN JOSI
D | Nashville Predators

A captain sometimes needs to put his team on his back, and Josi took that concept personally as he delivered the Predators to a playoff spot last year. The 34-year-old is still a three-zone workhorse and Norris threat.

19. CHARLIE MCAVOY
D | Boston Bruins

The two-way stud defenseman can hurt you with a bodycheck or scorch you with a great offensive move. Somehow, McAvoy remains underrated, but opponents know just how tough he is to play against.

20. SEBASTIAN AHO
C | Carolina Hurricanes

The quiet killer gets louder every year, and he's coming off a career season of 89 points. He's been threatening to score 40 goals for a few seasons and was a point-per-gamer in the playoffs.

21. KIRILL KAPRIZOV
LW | Minnesota Wild

Deceptively strong and endlessly entertaining with the puck, Kaprizov continues to produce without a lot of support. His 96 points were 27 more than second-place Matt Boldy on the Wild's scoring list.

22. MATTHEW TKACHUK
LW | Florida Panthers

Can you imagine if former Flame Tkachuk had won the Stanley Cup on Edmonton ice? As it was, the elite pest – and even better two-way force – got his revenge on the Oilers on home ice with the Panthers.

23. WILLIAM NYLANDER
RW | Toronto Maple Leafs

Coming off a career year that saw the silky operator put up 98 points, Nylander now has a massive contract extension to live up to. Will we see his first 100-point campaign in Toronto?

WILLIAM NYLANDER

NICK TURCHIARO-USA TODAY SPORTS

24. FILIP FORSBERG
LW I Nashville Predators

We've long wondered what Forsberg could do with more offensive help. With the additions of Steven Stamkos and Jonathan Marchessault, that time is now. The spotlight will be on the sublime sniper.

25. JEREMY SWAYMAN
G I Boston Bruins

His bosom buddy Linus Ullmark is gone, so we'll see what Swayman can do as a solo artist. But if the past few seasons are any indication, the Bruins remain in good hands between the pipes.

26. VICTOR HEDMAN
D I Tampa Bay Lightning

Armed with a new long-term extension, Hedman enters the season without Stamkos but reunited with former blueline compatriot Ryan McDonagh. At 33, Hedman is coming off one of his best offensive years.

27. J.T. MILLER
C I Vancouver Canucks

A major catalyst for the Canucks, Miller can sting you on special teams and at 5-on-5. He's coming off a 103-point campaign – his best season ever – and also won more than 56 percent of his faceoffs.

28. MITCH MARNER
RW I Toronto Maple Leafs

Yes, Leafs Nation is unsettled, but let's not forget Marner was a top-25 scorer and has flirted with 100 points a couple times. The shifty playmaker kills penalties, too. Big question: can he dial it up for the playoffs?

29. BRAYDEN POINT
C I Tampa Bay Lightning

A new generation of smaller forwards worships Point, who has broken the mold in the NHL and continues to thrive. The 5-foot-10 Lightning star is coming off a 46-goal campaign after 51 the year prior.

30. NOAH DOBSON
D I New York Islanders

Still underrated in most quarters, Dobson is simply a big, mobile defenseman who racks up points. He was seventh in NHL blueline scoring while logging a hefty 24:31 per night for the Islanders last season.

31. SAM REINHART
RW I Florida Panthers

He could have gone anywhere after the Panthers' Cup win, but he chose to stay in Florida. And why not? Reinhart ranked second in the NHL with 57 goals and was crucial to the championship run.

JACCOB SLAVIN

32. ELIAS PETTERSSON
C I Vancouver Canucks

We've seen the upside with 'Petey,' and despite some hills and valleys, finding players who have put up 100 points in the NHL is not easy. Pettersson is ultra-skilled and much improved on faceoffs.

33. MIRO HEISKANEN
D I Dallas Stars

A big-time minute-muncher on the back end, Heiskanen is also an effortless skater and a solid offensive contributor. Dallas is a Stanley Cup favorite, and if they break through, he'll be a big reason.

34. JUUSE SAROS
G I Nashville Predators

Shut down the rumor mill, because Nashville committed big money and term to Saros in the summer, and it's no shock why. Despite being one of the smallest goalies in the league, he's been a rock for the Preds.

35. SERGEI BOBROVSKY
G I Florida Panthers

We're going to keep trusting 'Bob' until he gives us a reason to change course. Though he wasn't bulletproof in the Cup final, he stood tall early in the series and again in Game 7 when it mattered most.

36. EVAN BOUCHARD
D I Edmonton Oilers

Bouchard's continued ascent is dizzying, and breaking Paul Coffey's record for assists in a single playoff by a D-man should serve as a warning for the rest of the league. He's got an absolute bomb of a point shot.

37. JACCOB SLAVIN
D I Carolina Hurricanes

You just can't find elite defensive defensemen like Slavin. He's almost a unicorn. The fact he won his second Lady Byng Trophy only reinforces his worth, because he doesn't take himself out with penalties.

38. JASON ROBERTSON
LW I Dallas Stars

The triggerman took a step back on the goal-scoring front last year – falling from 46 to 29 – but he still had 80 points. Robertson was more effective in the playoffs when he played with Roope Hintz.

TIMOTHY T. LUDWIG-USA TODAY SPORTS

TOP 50 PLAYERS IN THE NHL

ANDREI VASILEVSKIY

39. MAT BARZAL
C | New York Islanders

With Patrick Roy taking over as Isles coach in the middle of the season, Barzal had one of his best offensive campaigns ever. So, it only stands to reason that a full year under Roy will be even better.

40. JACK EICHEL
C | Vegas Golden Knights

A full season of Eichel in the lineup would be massive for Vegas, as the prototypical No. 1 center has been aces in his first two-and-a-half years there. Eichel was a key to the Golden Knights' Stanley Cup run in 2023.

41. ANDREI VASILEVSKIY
G | Tampa Bay Lightning

Was it one bad year, or is Vasilevskiy fading? Let's give the guy a chance. After all, he had to overcome major surgery last season. He's still one of the most intimidating netminders in the game.

42. JAKE OETTINGER
G | Dallas Stars

Speaking of intimidating netminders, Oettinger had some of the best advanced stats in the playoffs and will undoubtedly continue growing as he enters his prime. Playing for a great team doesn't hurt, either.

43. JAKE GUENTZEL
RW | Tampa Bay Lightning

He lived up to his reputation as a playoff performer despite his Carolina Hurricanes falling short of expectations. Now signed to a long-term deal for big money in Tampa Bay, Guentzel has a new challenge.

44. JOSH MORRISSEY
D | Winnipeg Jets

One year after 'Norrissey,' the Jets stalwart came back with another great performance and almost as many points. He was even better defensively, so expectations should remain high.

45. ZACH HYMAN
LW | Edmonton Oilers

Like Reinhart, Hyman broke out for his first 50-goal campaign with 54. Then, he netted another 16 in the playoffs. Draisaitl called Hyman a "little bull," and Hyman has smarts to go with that power.

46. KYLE CONNOR
LW | Winnipeg Jets

The Jets speedster still flies under the radar for the most part, so let's make sure he's counted here. Connor remains one of the NHL's more lethal goal-scorers, and he's especially dangerous on the power play.

47. ROOPE HINTZ
C | Dallas Stars

As the veterans cede way to the next generation in Dallas, Hintz will become even more crucial. He's a near point-per-gamer and a faceoff ace, and the Stars struggled when he missed playoff games.

48. BRADY TKACHUK
LW | Ottawa Senators

Power forwards who flirt with 40 goals and ring up more than 100 penalty minutes are hard to find these days, and Tkachuk manages to do it while also having the responsibility of the captaincy.

49. CONNOR BEDARD
C | Chicago Blackhawks

We got a taste in his Calder Trophy-winning campaign, and it was exactly what we expected. A kid with his dazzling skill set and compete level doesn't have to worry about a sophomore slump.

50. STEVEN STAMKOS
C | Nashville Predators

It's a brave new adventure for 'Stammer,' who trades in blue for gold with the Predators. He's getting long in the tooth at 34, but an impressive 40-goal campaign showed there's plenty left in the tank.

CALE MAKAR
COLORADO AVALANCHE

BETTER THAN BOBBY?

IT'S SACRILEGE TO SUGGEST ANY DEFENSEMAN IS SUPERIOR TO ORR. BUT WATCH CALE MAKAR CONTROL THE PLAY WITH HIS SKILL, SKATING AND SAVVY, AND YOU JUST MIGHT BELIEVE THE BLASPHEMY BY KEN CAMPBELL

PERHAPS IT HAS something to do with the fact people weren't fawning all over him and telling him how special he was from the time he was four. Then there was the time when he was 13, and he not only didn't make an under-14 AAA team in his town, he wasn't even asked to try out for one, because he was a 5-foot-2 defenseman. Or it just might have something to do with being raised properly. Because, believe it or not, some guys become elite players in The Best League in the World™ who are not nearly as impressed with themselves as everyone else is.

So, when Cale Makar, still with the flushed cheeks at 25, downplays his accomplishments and generally shuns the attention that comes with them, it's not a case of false modesty. He actually believes it. With Norris, Calder and Conn Smythe Trophy wins, Makar has already established himself as one of the all-time great defensemen in the game. In the eyes of most people, he's the best right now among a group that has to be considered a golden age of elite offensive defensemen. And depending upon when you believe players hit their primes, the best may still be yet to come. Last season, Makar hit the 250-point mark in 241 games, six games faster than Bobby Orr did it. Fifty points later, he got to 300 points in 280 games, one more than Orr.

Is the 2024 version of Cale Makar of the Colorado Avalanche a better hockey player than the 1960s and '70s Bobby Orr of the Boston Bruins? Of course he is, because evolution. (If you have any doubt on that one, try sitting your millennial kid in front of the final three games of the 1987 Canada Cup. Tell them hockey had never been played at a higher level to that point in history. Then hear them say after watching enough to get a feel for it, "Dad, this actually kind of sucks." And then say to yourself, "As much as it pains me to admit it, the kid's kind of right.") But the real question is, even with eras taken into account, could Makar actually challenge Orr for the designation of the greatest defenseman the game has ever seen? Even when Makar was going point-for-point against Orr, the natural instinct was that it's a preposterous notion.

It's a golden age for offensive defensemen in the NHL, and the ultra-talented Makar is the crown jewel.

COLORADO AVALANCHE

CALE MAKAR

But is it? Really? Well, according to Makar, it is. "I mean, it's like comparing a Dodge to a Ferrari," he said.

Man, that's self-deprecating. After all, they didn't call the movie Dodge v Ferrari, did they? All right, if Makar is going to classify himself as a Dodge, he's at the very least either a Viper or a 2023 Challenger SRT Demon 170, whatever the heck that is. So, that narrows the gap a little more. As does the fact that he's the most dynamic defenseman to come along since Orr. Nicklas Lidstrom was quietly and subtly otherworldly, Raymond Bourque was a master, Chris Pronger was a monster, and Brian Leetch was as cerebral as they come. But none of them consistently had the game-breaking component that Makar has in his arsenal. Perhaps the comparisons aren't so outlandish.

"I never saw Bobby Orr play," said Makar's former teammate Zach Parise, whose father J.P. played against Orr, "but Makar does stuff that controls the game, stuff that's amazing. He's the best D-man I've ever seen."

Added Avalanche coach Jared Bednar: "I think Cale is deserving of that (comparison). He's an elite player. His career numbers say that. The eye test says that. It's a matter of time before everyone sees what he's capable of. Certainly, there's some appreciation here of what he's doing, and it's growing across North America, what he's able to do and how he's able to play."

And then, of course, there was an observation from none other than Wayne Gretzky during Makar's run to the Stanley Cup and Conn Smythe in 2022, calling Makar, "the closest player we've seen that offensively and defensively can make an impact on the game that much, (since) probably Bobby Orr."

The thing about Orr's greatness is that the gap between him and the rest of the league during that era was immense. He was that much better than every other player on the planet. But it was also a time when players took four-minute shifts and used training camp to get into shape. So, is it so outlandish to suggest Makar might have the same kind of impact as Orr in an era when the margin between the elite players and the rest of the league has narrowed considerably?

Makar joked with his teammates after scoring his 300th point that, "in (Orr's) next 200 games, he gets like 500 points. It's unattainable what he did." Technically, it was 434 points in his next 262 games, but we get the sentiment. There is no way Makar will do that, because that's the equivalent of a 136-point-season pace over three-plus seasons. Only Nikita Kucherov and Nathan MacKinnon managed to eclipse that total in 2023-24. A 100-point season, though, is not out of the question for Makar. Perhaps even a couple of them. Orr played nine full seasons in the NHL, where goals per game bottomed out at 5.58 and maxed out at 6.85. In the five years Makar has been in the league, the lowest number of goals per game has been 5.87, with the highest at 6.36. So, as far as overall league offensive production, their eras are actually fairly comparable.

Orr won eight straight Norris Trophies, which is something else Makar will never do, but that also had a lot to do again with the margin between Orr and the rest of the league. When Orr won his second Norris Trophy in 1968-69, the other four finalists were Tim Horton, Ted Green, Ted Harris and Al Arbour. When he won his final Norris in '74-75, the gap had narrowed, with Denis Potvin, Guy Lapointe, Borje Salming and Serge Savard rounding out the finalists. Over the next few years, Makar will get a steady diet of rivals in the form of Quinn Hughes, Roman Josi, Adam Fox and a host of others.

But where Makar can draw comparisons to Orr is in how he plays the game. And how he skates. His edges and mobility are complete game-changers. His skating ability allows him to find the open seams in the offensive zone and hold onto the puck longer without fear of losing it and giving up an odd-man rush the other way. "He doesn't have a panic point," said Pronger, who counts Makar and Miro Heiskanen as the best two-way defensemen in the game today. "And much like (former NHL defenseman) Scotty (Niedermayer) and the other great skaters, they don't have a panic point, because they firmly believe they can catch the guy the other way. They're not scared. They can catch them, and they're right, and they know they're right."

Makar also gets the puck on net, or near the net, better than anyone since Pronger. His wrist shot from the point is as good as anyone's since Mike Green, and his ability to find players near the net is reminiscent of Lidstrom. "I just try to shoot it for their stick, whether it's an inch wide or just on the side of the net," Makar said. "You've got to reward guys for going to the net. A good D-man tries to do that."

And Makar is doing it while logging ice time that puts him in the top 10 in the NHL. Along with defense partner Devon Toews, he's also taking the hard assignments against the opponents' best players. But perhaps most impressive is that he incurred only eight minor penalties all season – two each for interference and tripping and one each for cross-checking, slashing, embellishment and puck over the glass. That means Makar was whistled for exactly six physical fouls in 2023-24. Six. In fact, his 16 penalty minutes last season was the third-fewest among the top 50 players in ice time per game, and only six other players who averaged 20 or more minutes per game registered fewer PIM than Makar did.

Jaccob Slavin, one of only four defensemen in NHL history to win the Lady Byng Trophy, was one of those guys. He plays a lot of hard minutes as well, but since the award goes to "the player adjudged to have exhibited the best type of sportsmanship and gentlemanly conduct combined with a high standard of playing ability," perhaps there'll be room for Makar to become the fifth. (Provided he cuts out the embellishment penalties, because that's not very sportsmanlike.) "It's not like he's protected and just playing in the 'O' zone," Parise said. "He's our first guy on the penalty kill, too. This guy will probably win the Lady Byng, Norris, Hart, maybe even the Vezina?"

Parise is joking, of course. Orr never won a Vezina, either, although you get the impression that if either he or Makar had ever strapped on the pads, they might. Makar will have to settle for perennially being among the top contenders for the Norris Trophy for the next decade or so in a crowded field that keeps getting better. He appears to be up to the task.

AHEAD OF THE 2026 OLYMPICS, SUPER-SNIPER AUSTON MATTHEWS JOINS A CADRE OF NHL STARS HUNTING FOR A TITLE AT THE 4 NATIONS FACE-OFF

BY RYAN KENNEDY

WITH HIS preternatural goal-scoring ability and constantly evolving two-way game, Auston Matthews is one of the deadliest hockey players in the world. But since playing with the elite kids of Team North America at the 2016 World Cup of Hockey, he hasn't had the chance to show what he's capable of on the international stage.

Since the past two Olympics did not feature NHLers, the Toronto Maple Leafs center has been on the sidelines, just like the rest of his superstar friends. In fact, the last time Matthews wore a Team USA jersey was back in 2016 when, as a teenager on the precipice of being drafted first overall by the Leafs, he played for the Americans at the World Championship. He also suited up for the U.S. earlier that year at the 2016 World Junior Championship.

That's all about to change, however.

Matthews was one of the first six American players named to the 4 Nations Face-Off tournament, a new gambit from the NHL to whet the international appetites of fans ahead of the 2026 Olympics in Milan, where the best players in the world are expected to return to that grand stage.

Team USA will face off against Canada, Sweden and Finland in February, and those involved expect fireworks. "It's going to be extremely competitive," Matthews said. "Best-on-best is something that guys have really been wanting for a while, and I think it's just great for the game. It's going to be extremely competitive, and there's a lot of pride in playing for your country."

Growing up, Matthews found his own U.S. heroes on the international stage. "It was a tough result, but the 2010 Olympic team, they placed second," he said. "But, obviously, a lot of those guys, Patrick Kane or T.J. Oshie, the whole shootout and all that stuff against Russia (in 2014), that's probably my fondest memory of watching Team USA as a kid."

Matthews kicked off his elite career playing for USA Hockey's National Team Development Program for two years, where his teammates included Matthew Tkachuk and Charlie McAvoy, who were also named to Team USA's 4 Nations roster. In all likelihood, the majority of Team USA's 4 Nations squad will have NTDP roots. All six named so far cut their teeth at 'The Program,' with Jack Eichel, Adam Fox and Quinn Hughes also on board. "You're with each other for two years, and you become extremely close," Matthews said. "So, I'm still really tight with a lot of guys I played with there. It's just a unique program. Even though you go your separate ways, you always keep in touch. I have a lot of really great memories there, and we had a really great group of guys, so I'm looking forward to reconnecting with a lot of them."

Not that it will be easy for Matthews and the U.S. at the 4 Nations. Canada's first six included Connor McDavid, Nathan MacKinnon and Sidney Crosby, while the Swedes boast blueline kings Victor Hedman and Erik Karlsson. Finland counters with Stanley Cup captain Aleksander Barkov and Nashville's franchise goalie, Juuse Saros.

"In situations and tournaments like this, it's kind of about who can come together and be a team as quickly as possible," Matthews said. "That's usually the team that has the most success, and that's the main goal. You're going to have a lot of really elite players. It's just putting the ego aside and doing what's best for the team and coming together as quickly as possible."

Matthews' last international action was in 2016, when he played in the world juniors, men's worlds and World Cup.

> "BEST-ON-BEST IS SOMETHING THAT GUYS HAVE REALLY BEEN WANTING FOR A WHILE, AND I THINK IT'S JUST GREAT FOR THE GAME – AUSTON MATTHEWS

It will also be a fun event for the coaches and GMs constructing the rosters. The Americans are led by Cup-winning bench boss Mike Sullivan and GM Bill Guerin, himself a U.S. international alum. And being on the same side as a talent such as Matthews will be a nice break from their usual jobs in the NHL. "Anytime you have players of that caliber, you certainly would rather have them on your bench," Sullivan said. "It's going to be exciting. It will give me and Billy an opportunity to get to know these guys on a more personal level. And that's one of the more fulfilling things about these types of experiences."

The 4 Nations might act as a nice respite for Matthews, who will again be chasing that elusive playoff success in Toronto. The stakes continue to ramp up for the group, though there is no doubt the Leafs have one of the top players in the world in their lineup. Matthews nearly hit the vaunted 70-goal mark last season, falling one tally short. He could easily find that range again this year, which would help the Leafs get into an advantageous spot for the post-season. With Chris Tanev and Oliver Ekman-Larsson joining the blueline, Toronto's defense will have much more of a playoff feel, while young goalie Joseph Woll looks poised for a full-season breakout.

So, Matthews will get two opportunities for glory this season – can he pull off the double? H

TAMPA BAY LIGHTNING

RIDE THE LIGHTNING

AFTER A SUMMER OF CHANGE IN TAMPA BAY, MAINSTAY VICTOR HEDMAN IS READY TO TAKE THE LEADERSHIP TORCH BY DILLON COLLINS

IN MANY WAYS, VICTOR Hedman was born to be a Bolt. Imposing, explosive and unrelenting in his pursuit of greatness, the 6-foot-7, 245-pound defenseman has been everything and more for the Tampa Bay Lightning since the club drafted him second overall in 2009.

Hedman is a six-time Norris Trophy finalist (winning the award in 2018), a six-time all-star, a two-time Stanley Cup champion and the 2020 Conn Smythe Trophy winner. Now 33, he continues to be one of the game's absolute best on the blueline. But in seasons of change, there are no certainties, and nothing is more sure than that there is no sure thing.

The Lightning's dynastic core experienced a shock to the system this summer with the departure of longtime captain and franchise ace Steven Stamkos, the team's all-time leader in multiple metrics. The news of Stamkos' signing with Nashville came just one day before Hedman – Stamkos' longtime alternate captain and friend – inked a four-year, $32-million extension to remain with the team through 2028-29.

"Obviously, seeing 'Stammer' go, losing a guy that has been my best friend for the past 15 years, was not something that anyone expected," Hedman said. "Me and Stammer have had a lot of conversations throughout the past few weeks. What's been said is going to stay between us, but it's a sad, sad day, not just for me but for the fans, the organization and the city of Tampa.

"It's going to be hard to imagine going into our locker room and going into Amalie Arena and not seeing him on the ice. It's going to be super, super weird, but at the end of the day, hockey is a business, and this is what it has come to. And, for us, it's just about looking forward."

The exit of Stamkos, owner of the most goals (555) and points (1,137) in Lightning history, was just one of the off-season moves made by GM Julien BriseBois to shake up the roster. The club brought back blueliner Ryan McDonagh in May before shipping off defender Mikhail Sergachev and gritty winger Tanner Jeannot in separate trades at the draft. Tampa Bay also made one of the biggest splashes in free agency, inking sought-after scoring winger Jake Guentzel to a seven-year, $63-million deal. But no addition or subtraction shook the hockey world quite like that of Stamkos.

"Best-case scenario, we would have loved to finish our careers in Tampa Bay together...I strongly admire what 'Stammer' has done not just for me but the whole city and the organization, and being a big part in winning two Stanley Cups and having all the records that he has. He'll obviously go down as one of the best to ever play the game."

But as the saying goes, the show must go on, and Hedman continued his standard Spartan-like off-season fitness regimen with longtime Swedish trainer Joakim Dettner, who has honed his game with a combination of explosiveness, agility and endurance. Hedman is no stranger to pushing his mind and body in the name of the game he loves.

It took Hedman a few years to find his NHL footing, but by Year 5, he was receiving Norris and all-star votes. From that point forward, there was no stopping this boulder of a blueliner.

In 2013-14, Hedman was one of the game's most potent offensive threats from the blueline, collecting 55 points in 75 games. He eclipsed that total with 72 points in 2016-17, then won the Norris the following year. The Bolts claimed the Presidents' Trophy in 2018-19, then won back-to-back Stanley Cups in 2019-20 and '20-21, with Hedman earning the Conn Smythe Trophy as playoff MVP for the first of those two titles.

His production has hardly slowed with age. Following a career-high 85 points in 2021-22, Hedman put up 49 points in 76 games the following year, then rebounded with a near point-per-game pace of 76 points in 78 games last season, helping to earn the high-dollar contract extension in the only NHL market he's ever called home.

"I love the organization," Hedman said." I love the city. I love the fans. And I love playing and wearing that Lightning (logo) on my chest. I'm super excited to do that for another four years, and, hopefully, when it's all said and done, to retire as a Bolt."

Off the ice, family man Hedman has laid down roots in the Tampa Bay area. His wife and children love the Sunshine State, which made the decision to re-up with the club an easy one. "For me, I don't know anything else,

> "I LOVE THE ORGANIZATION. I LOVE THE CITY. I LOVE THE FANS and I don't want to know anything else," Hedman said. "Tampa has become a home for us. Me and my wife, we have our two boys born in Tampa and roots there that go a long way. I've been there almost half my life. I'm just super proud and excited to hopefully retire a Bolt."

Hedman is understandably tight-lipped at the prospect of becoming the Lightning's next captain, but he's the undisputed leader in Tampa Bay and a natural choice to wear the 'C.' He's calm, composed and tactful – a player who leads by example on and off the ice.

Said as modestly as expected for a player of his character, the next phase for the Lightning will require an all-hands-on-deck approach. "For us, it's got to be a group effort," Hedman said. "And it obviously starts with me. I have to take another step in my abilities and my leadership abilities. It's so fresh and so emotional right now. But there's going to be a realization early on in training camp that 'Stammer' isn't there, and we're just going to have to be ready for that. And obviously, for me, I have to be ready to try and lead and steer the ship and just help the group to come together."

Scheifele is in it for the long haul in Winnipeg, where he's on pace to be the Jets' all-time scoring leader.

MAKING HIS

MARK SCHEIFELE HAS A CHANCE TO SPEND HIS ENTIRE CAREER IN WINNIPEG – AND MAYBE, JUST MAYBE, LEAVE A LEGACY SIMILAR TO THAT OF HIS MENTOR AND JETS ICON DALE HAWERCHUK BY KEN CAMPBELL

EVERY SINGLE time he shows up for work at the Canada Life Centre or whatever they're calling it these days, Mark Scheifele makes his way down Hargrave Street in downtown Winnipeg. When he stops at the traffic light at Graham Avenue before pulling into the players' underground parking lot, he looks over to see a magnificent bronze statue of Dale Hawerchuk, which is right there on Dale Hawerchuk Way. It's a 10-foot-high piece of work, 13 feet high if you include the base, depicting 'Ducky' carrying the puck in mid-stride, his left arm out and his right at the top of his stick. Hawerchuk knew the Jets had been planning to erect a statue of him before he died of cancer in the summer of 2020, and he joked to a former teammate that they originally wanted to make a statue of him backchecking, but there was no photographic evidence available of him doing that.

Seeing that statue gives Mark Scheifele all the feels. Hawerchuk was such a big part of his life, becoming a mentor and his coach in junior. The story goes that Scheifele was ripping it up in Jr. B hockey as a 16-year-old and was all set to go to Cornell when he and his parents stopped in on Hawerchuk, who was running the OHL's Barrie Colts at the time, on the way home from a tournament in Huntsville, Ont. It took about 10 minutes for Hawerchuk to convince Scheifele that his path to the NHL should be through Barrie. Scheifele has some wonderful memories of Hawerchuk, who taught him both life lessons and how to win defensive-zone draws on his off-side.

That statue also gives the 31-year-old Scheifele – how did that happen so quickly? – a chance to ponder his own legacy in Winnipeg. And it's not just because former Jets coach Paul Maurice once said of Scheifele, "He has that (potential) to be a 'one-team player that wins the Cup and is the captain of it at some point and gets a bronze statue in front of the building' kind of guy." For the record, Maurice made that comment in early 2019, more than two years before they commissioned the Hawerchuk memorial.

"HE HAS THAT (POTENTIAL) TO BE A ONE-TEAM PLAYER THAT WINS THE CUP AND IS THE CAPTAIN AND GETS A BRONZE STATUE IN FRONT OF THE BUILDING" – PAUL MAURICE

It's easy to forget that Hawerchuk played seven of his 16 seasons and 475 of his 1,188 career NHL games for teams other than the Jets. He's that embedded in the fabric of the franchise. At the unveiling of the statue in 2022, where Scheifele gave a passionate speech, Hawerchuk's wife, Crystal, told the assembled crowd, "Now he is back home again in Winnipeg."

So, yeah, about that. We live in a world where Ilya Kovalchuk is considered the current Jets' all-time leader in goals, which is all kinds of ridiculous because he played in Atlanta before the franchise relocated to Winnipeg. We also live in a world where Hawerchuk is fifth in games played, second in goals, third in assists and second in points for the now-and-perhaps-forever defunct Coyotes/Jets franchise. But let's cut the nonsense here. Hawerchuk is first in points with 929 and in goals with 379 among players who were actually wearing a Jets uniform at the time. He's second in assists with 550, three behind Thomas Steen.

But Scheifele is climbing the charts. With 717 career points, he still has a way to go to pass Blake Wheeler (795) and Steen (817) before getting to Hawerchuk. His 297 goals put him 82 in arrears of Hawerchuk, and his 420 assists are 133 behind Steen. If he plays a full season in 2024-25, Scheifele will pass Wheeler (874) for No. 2 in games played, and he needs two healthy seasons to catch Steen for No. 1 all-time (950). But he's got some time.

Just when it looked last summer as though he might play out the final season of his deal in Winnipeg, Scheifele signed a seven-year pact worth $59.5 million, which kicks in this season – the exact same contract signed by Vezina Trophy-winning goalie Connor Hellebuyck on the same day. So, there's a good chance Scheifele becomes the longest-tenured Jet and the leader in almost every significant category, although Laurie Boschman's 1,338 penalty minutes will be safe. "It's a huge deal," Scheifele said. "To have the opportunity for your legacy to be a part of a team for your entire career is a huge honor. It shows a lot of trust in them for me and me in them as well. That's a big reason I decided to stick around. We have a fantastic group of guys who want to work on their game."

They really do things differently in Winnipeg. The organization has created a close-knit, family-like atmosphere for its players and values loyalty as a two-way street. That might not matter to a lot of players, but it does to Scheifele, who doesn't seem to mind being a large fish on a small, frozen pond.

As for the statue thing, well, that will take care of itself. Some of that will depend on whether Scheifele & Co. can do what Hawerchuk could not and lead the Jets to the promised land. For all his brilliance, Hawerchuk was never able to get the Jets out of the second round, mainly because he played at a time when division rivals Edmonton and Calgary were in the middle of an arms race.

In his 11 full seasons in Winnipeg, Scheifele has played in one conference final and one second round, pockmarked by nine years where the Jets either lost in the first round or didn't make the playoffs. When the Jets cleared out their stalls after losing in the first round last season, Scheifele talked about how the Jets want to be more like the team that vanquished them, the Colorado Avalanche. "I think Colorado is a great team to learn from," Scheifele said. "You see what (Nathan) MacKinnon has done. You see what (Cale) Makar has done. You see what guys who have been traded there or signed there have done with their careers. Those guys take great pride in their bodies and their games and going home every summer and improving. We saw firsthand the abilities that those guys have.

Scheifele liked the way he played last year, with a caveat: "There's always room to grow in all areas of the game."

"They're skilled players, but I know them personally, and they go home every summer and give it their all. They don't leave one stone unturned on improving their games. I think we all have to look at ourselves in the mirror and say, 'What am I doing to improve, to try to get 10 percent better this summer?' I really look at those guys and that team with a ton of respect."

That's a pretty high bar, but there are some key pieces on the Jets roster. Scheifele is the No. 1 center who has sneakily developed a good two-way game. On defense, they have Josh Morrissey, who is under contract for four more seasons and whom Scheifele says, "is one of my best friends whom I skate with in the summer and spend pretty much every waking minute of the season with. That's something you can't find anywhere." And in net, there's Hellebuyck, who burped up a mess in the playoffs but remains one of the best goaltenders on the planet.

Scheifele has been a point-per-game player throughout most of his career, but he has made enormous strides on the defensive side of the game. Last season in particular, he became that two-way center every winning team must possess.

"I liked my year," Scheifele said. "I don't think you can ever look at it and say, 'This is the apex,' because there's always room to grow in all areas of the game. There's always things to work on. But I liked the things I worked on last summer, and I liked the things I worked on throughout the season. I look at every day as a chance to get better and a chance to work on something maybe you didn't do well the previous game or you haven't done well in the last week or so."

And what Scheifele can't control, he leaves to those at a higher pay grade. From the time he went to Baptist Church every Sunday as a child in his hometown of Kitchener, Ont., Scheifele has never hidden his Christianity, which is another thing he shares with Morrissey. Whether it's getting injured or dealing with everything that comes with being a professional athlete, Scheifele believes there is a greater plan for him. "I just feel very, very, very blessed for everything that happens," he said. "And everything happens for a reason, and you've just got to trust in God's will and know it's not up to you, it's up to Him."

And if Scheifele plays his career in Winnipeg and accomplishes what he hopes to, presumably He will approve of the statue of Scheifele alongside Hawerchuk.

AS GOOD AS DUNN

HE NEVER RECEIVED MUCH HYPE COMING UP OR DURING HIS EARLY NHL DAYS IN ST. LOUIS, BUT VINCE DUNN HAS EMERGED AS ONE OF THE LEAGUE'S MOST PRODUCTIVE DEFENSEMEN SINCE LANDING IN SEATTLE BY JARED CLINTON

A KEEN SENSE OF timing is often among the best weapons in the arsenal of the NHL's top offensive defensemen. And given his standing among the leading blueline point producers the past two seasons, it can safely be said that alongside his penchant for delivering a crisp stretch pass and slipping into shooting lanes, Vince Dunn has discovered the fine art of arriving in the right place at the right time.

Now, if only that skill could've translated to his summer holiday travels. Alas, a trip Dunn had hoped would align with experiencing rabid football fandom during UEFA's Euro 2024 didn't quite pan out. "Funny enough, the travel schedule that I had made coincidentally lined up with the Euro teams playing, Italy and Portugal, while I was there," Dunn said. "And then, while I was there, flights ended up getting changed and cancelled. When I was in Italy, Portugal was playing, and while I was in Portugal, Italy was playing. So I didn't really get to see the European hype."

The Kraken were in the playoff hunt with Dunn in the lineup last year, but they cratered when he got hurt.

It was a tough break for Dunn, but there's only so much heartbreak that can be conjured up for the 27-year-old Seattle Kraken defenseman, who has, over the past three seasons, experienced an almost unfettered personal rise and individual on-ice success.

To some, Dunn's ascension has been somewhat surprising. To others, it's been wholly unexpected. Drafted in the second round, 56th overall, in 2015, Dunn was rarely in the limelight. The native of Mississauga, Ont., didn't get the attention that comes with representing Canada at the under-18s or the world juniors. And at no point in his development was he considered the cream of the Blues' talent crop. Case in point: panels of scouts polled in The Hockey News' Future Watch issues in 2016 and 2017 didn't rank him among St. Louis' top three up-and-comers.

But Dunn continued to make the most of every opportunity, first in big-league training camps, later by earning a selection to the AHL All-Star Game and then by making the most of meager minutes in St. Louis. Four years into his NHL career, though, Dunn found himself shut out from the top of the Blues' depth chart, blocked by Justin Faulk, Torey Krug and Colton Parayko. And while he speaks highly about his time with the organization, he looks back and remembers yearning for a greater challenge. "As my years went on in St. Louis, I think I plateaued and, obviously, wasn't ever given another level of opportunity to really showcase what I knew I always had," he said. "Maybe not to this capability, but I always knew I had more to show."

Indeed, since he was scooped up from the Blues by the Kraken in the expansion draft, Dunn has seen his career on a steady upward trajectory. First, he stepped into a regular top-four role. By his second year in the Emerald City, he became the blueline's de facto leader. Now, heading into his fourth season in Seattle, Dunn can be counted among the league's best offensive defensemen. In fact, there are only 11 defenders who had more points and scored at a higher per-game rate than Dunn over the past two seasons.

In part, Dunn's success is predicated on many of the same attributes he's long possessed. He's been blessed with exceptional on-ice vision and skating ability. He also has a great mind for the game. But a big part of his transformation has been mental and physical maturation and accepting that, at times, he'll have to get his nose dirty. "That brings out the best in my game, being aggressive and being assertive," he said. "Not being a dirty player or a reckless player, but holding my ground and making sure I'm able to handle myself out there. I just want to always be a presence out there, not just offensively but defensively and physically. If you can have all three of those things in one way, shape or form, that just brings the best out of your natural skill and talent."

Also a boon? The partnership he's formed with fellow blueliner Adam Larsson. Over the past two seasons, the two have been almost inseparable. Of Dunn's more than 2,600 minutes at five-a-side since the start of 2022-23, only 346 have been played without Larsson as his partner.

What has made the two such a great fit is the "yin and yang balance," said Dunn. Whereas Larsson can be considered an archetypal big-bodied, stay-at-home defenseman, Dunn is of a modern, free-wheeling breed. And there's also the matter of mindset. Larsson, who is nearly four years to the day Dunn's senior, is referred to by the younger of the pairing as having an "old-school mentality," and Dunn said his more veteran partner has helped shape his on- and off-ice outlook. Together, they help each other remain on an even keel. "We know we pull a lot of weight back there, so we never want to let each other down," Dunn said. "And we know that if we're not playing our best, we're definitely letting the team down. There's a lot of accountability there, which really helps us push each other."

Dunn's importance, in particular, has perhaps never been more apparent than last season. When he was in the lineup, the Kraken managed a .568 points percentage, which would have kept them in the playoff hunt. But in the 23 games Dunn missed – including all but two of Seattle's final 21 games after he sustained an upper-body injury in March – the Kraken cratered to an ugly .304 points percentage.

But after a summer of rest and recovery, Dunn feels positive about where he's at. He also feels good about Seattle's direction, which included bringing in coach Dan Bylsma and adding center Chandler Stephenson and defenseman Brandon Montour via free agency. With the addition of Montour, as well as Josh Mahura, Dunn will have extra competition on the blueline. But just as he has throughout his career, he'll meet the challenge head-on and treat it as an opportunity to add new elements to his game. "I'll probably be seeing more of the defensive side of draws and defensive situations," he said, "and hopefully even getting a bit of penalty-killing time. That'd be great for my game."

Speaking more broadly, he sees it as a step toward the Kraken's primary goal: returning to the post-season and challenging for the Stanley Cup. "When teams make changes, they're motivated to win," Dunn said. "That's what I'm ready to do." H

NHL TEAM REPORTS

DALLAS STARS

IT'S IN THE STARS

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO THIS SEASON, DALLAS FELL TO NEW JERSEY IN THE 2000 STANLEY CUP FINAL. THIS TIME AROUND, THE STARS RETURN THE FAVOR

BY RYAN KENNEDY

The Stars have reached three conference finals in the past five years. It's time for a championship breakthrough.

BELIEVE IT OR not, we're approaching the 25th anniversary of the New Jersey Devils winning the Stanley Cup over the Dallas Stars. In 2025, the staff of The Hockey News predicts that Dallas will get belated revenge of sorts by seizing the championship over those same Devils.

Coming off a 2024 Cup final that had enough twists and turns to give Florida-Edmonton instant-classic status, the bar has been set high for drama. And the road to the final will be difficult for both teams.

Most obviously, we must acknowledge that New Jersey didn't even make the playoffs last season. But there were some pretty big caveats to explain that. Linchpin defenseman Dougie Hamilton missed almost the entire campaign due to injury, burgeoning superstar Jack Hughes was sidelined for 20 games, and the goaltending was poor at best.

A healthy New Jersey lineup for this season looks impressive. In terms of goaltending, the team traded for a legit No. 1 in Jacob Markstrom, while Jake Allen (acquired at last year's trade deadline) returns as a solid backup option. The blueline also got stronger with the addition of erstwhile Carolina Hurricanes defender Brett Pesce, plus expected growth from uber-promising youngsters Luke Hughes and Simon Nemec. Behind the bench, there's a new voice in Sheldon Keefe – who doesn't have the best track record in the NHL playoffs but did win an AHL Calder Cup championship with the Toronto Marlies before he took over the Maple Leafs.

Sure, there will be competi-

tion in the East. The New York Rangers were the Presidents' Trophy winners last season, but their under-the-hood numbers were just so-so, which helps explain why they fell short in the playoffs. With little roster change over the summer, the Rangers have a challenge on their hands. The reigning champions from Florida will be formidable again, but we worry about two short summers in a row for the Cats. As for the Hurricanes, we won't get fooled again – until they prove us wrong.

Out West, the Stars will have a challenging path – but it won't be any harder than last year when they had to play Vegas in the first round, followed by Colorado and Edmonton. Those Oilers will be contenders once again, as will the Avalanche. You know Connor McDavid and Nathan MacKinnon won't be satisfied with how last season ended for their teams.

This is where we acknowledge just how hard it is to go all the way. Let's not forget that Vancouver pushed the Oilers to Game 7 despite using their third-string goalie throughout the series. As for the Avalanche, the unknowns surrounding Gabriel Landeskog (injury) and Valeri Nichushkin (suspension as part of the NHL/NHLPA player assistance program) are notable. Yes, Colorado has all-world talents in MacKinnon, Cale Makar and Mikko Rantanen, but are they deep enough to carve a path back to the championship in a competitive conference?

While it won't be easy, Dallas is battle-tested enough to push through for the franchise's second Cup title. Yes, the Stars lost a couple of important hardened veterans in Chris Tanev and Joe Pavelski, but more importantly, we'll see several Stars in their absolute primes this season. Keep in mind, when Dallas lost to Edmonton in the conference final last spring, the Stars didn't have the full services of a banged-up Roope Hintz. When Hintz did play, his running mate Jason Robertson was much more effective. Wyatt Johnston has already established himself as an excellent young NHLer, and he projects to be better this time around, while rookies Logan Stankoven and Mavrik Bourque give the team incredible depth up front. And let's not forget captain Jamie Benn, who will look to continue his recent 'Bennaissance.'

The back end is dominated by the criminally underrated Miro Heiskanen, who has found an amazing partner in Thomas Harley. The Stars have a lot of size on the blueline (a prerequisite if you want to win the Cup), and they could get even bigger if 6-foot-6, 235-pound rookie Lian Bichsel makes the team. Meanwhile, Jake Oettinger continues to develop into an elite NHL netminder and is poised to continue his ascent at 25. The Stars have a seasoned coach in Peter DeBoer and a savvy GM in Jim Nill, so the braintrust is good to go.

Will the path to the Cup be easy? Of course not. But why not Dallas? Like the Devils, they were a top-10 possession team last year and have the chance to be even better this year.

The top-end parity in the NHL is daunting, as we haven't even mentioned squads such as Vegas or Nashville – we even had an Islanders truther in the THN staff meeting – but the Stars have proven themselves to be a tough out in recent years, and we feel they've learned all the right lessons. As long as they stay healthy and get the internal growth we expect, there will be a lot of celebrating deep in the heart of Texas next summer.

BY GREG BEACHAM

PAT VERBEEK INSPIRED STRONG emotions during his playing career. But as Anaheim's GM, he has yet to put together a team that excites.

Verbeek has been preaching extreme patience since his first day on the job in February 2022, when he predicted it might take five years for the Ducks to be a playoff team again. After Anaheim lost a franchise-record 50 games in regulation last season and meekly missed the post-season for the sixth consecutive year, Verbeek only said he wants Anaheim to "make a push" to get "in the conversation of making the playoffs" in 2024-25.

He then came up empty in free agency, missing out on every big name despite $20-plus million in cap room and obvious need for veteran help. Verbeek and coach Greg Cronin have accumulated a treasure trove of blue-chip talent during this slow rebuilding process, but it's not a great sign when a team's most exciting off-season additions are new uniforms and an updated version of its classic logo.

>OFFENSE

The Ducks are dead last over the past five seasons at 2.53 goals per game, but that could change soon, as nearly every team would be thrilled to have Anaheim's collection of attacking prospects. Cronin's task is to get them to shine at the highest level. Leo Carlsson gave many glimpses of his extraordinary ability while scoring 29 points in 55 games as a teenaged rookie. His left winger this season could be 20-year-old Cutter Gauthier, the precocious goal-scorer plucked from Philadelphia in the boldest move of Verbeek's tenure. Mason McTavish and offense-minded defenseman Pavel Mintyukov made strides when they weren't injured. Trevor Zegras suited up for only 31 games last year while learning to play two-way hockey, but his skill set remains tantalizing. Anaheim's youngsters still have too few veterans to lean on, but Verbeek added Robby Fabbri in a trade with Detroit. Frank Vatrano returns after leading the Ducks with a career-high 60 points, and Troy Terry has three straight 20-goal seasons.

DEFENSE

The Ducks improved a bit defensively under Cronin, although they couldn't have been much worse after allowing more goals (355) during 2022-23 than any team since 1995-96. The only new name on the blueline is Brian Dumoulin. He's a solid vet but not a game-changer. Ducks lifer Cam Fowler and hardnosed Radko Gudas are back along with youngsters Mintyukov, Olen Zellweger and Jackson LaCombe.

GOALTENDING

Lukas Dostal, 24, looks ready to be an NHL starter. Trouble is, the Ducks still have John Gibson under contract for three more years at $6.4 million per season. Gibson's declining performance last year made it tougher to trade him, and Anaheim could enter the season with the two netminders sharing the No. 1 job. It's not the worst problem to have, but the Ducks are hoping Gibson rediscovers his elite form.

SPECIAL TEAMS

The Ducks were dismal, ranking 25th on the power play and 31st on the penalty kill. Cronin dropped assistant coach Newell Brown, who coordinated the power play, and added first-time NHL assistant Rich Clune, who ran the AHL Toronto Marlies' man-advantage unit last season after being hired Nov. 29.

INTANGIBLES

The Ducks haven't had a captain since Ryan Getzlaf retired two years ago, and their lack of conventional leadership seems glaring when things go wrong. Verbeek said they'll likely appoint a captain this season. While some believe giving the captaincy to an elite youngster such as Carlsson or McTavish makes sense as a long-term statement of stability, veterans such as Gudas, Fowler and Alex Killorn will play leadership roles with or without the 'C.'

CUP ODDS

ROOKIES

Gauthier is likely to get his shot, and he'll be in the spotlight after his messy breakup with the Flyers. The Ducks are being patient with Tristan Luneau after his knee infection, but they'd clearly love the promising defenseman to prove he's NHL-ready.

X-FACTOR

The Ducks' young core needs time to mature, but the franchise's overall lack of urgency must change before it returns to the playoff conversation. Verbeek's placid public demeanor and his inability to land any major players in the off-season underline the perception that Anaheim isn't in a hurry to be good again. Even the Ducks' most loyal fans won't be content forever with new sweaters.

THE BRASS

Owner Henry Samueli's wealth and vision have kept Anaheim thriving off the ice during the team's playoff drought. The Ducks have a world-class new training facility, and they're developing the land around Honda Center into an entertainment complex.

BOSTON BRUINS

BY MICK COLAGEO

THE SEVEN-GAME OUSTER OF Toronto signified that there's a future in Boston after Patrice Bergeron and David Krejci, but with Pavel Zacha and Matthew Poitras exhibiting growing pains at center, GM Don Sweeney targeted UFA Elias Lindholm. He also signed Nikita Zadorov, fortifying the left side of the defense.

The Bruins think they're close, especially after backfilling with several cap-friendly contracts, contending in the Presidents' Trophy race and taking Florida to six games. David Pastrnak and Charlie McAvoy are embracing leadership roles, strengthening Brad Marchand's captaincy. Jeremy Swayman performed as 2022-23 Vezina Trophy winner Linus Ullmark's regular-season equal and emerged as Boston's playoff starter and future of the franchise. In June, Ullmark was traded to Ottawa, getting Boston back into the first round of the draft, where they selected rangy center Dean Letourneau at 25th overall.

>OFFENSE

Lindholm fills a hole as a veteran center with an enviable three-zone game. As the glue between Pastrnak and Zacha, his point production stands to increase. But who will skate on the right side with Marchand and Charlie Coyle? Morgan Geekie supplanted Zacha as the second-line center in the playoffs, but expect auditions after Jake DeBrusk's departure. Florida coach Paul Maurice said what he feared most about the Bruins was their four-man attack, and Zadorov will presumably enable McAvoy to further embrace his offense. Arrivals Mark Kastelic (via the Ullmark trade) and Max Jones (UFA signing) will help Boston correct a lack of physicality on the forecheck.

DEFENSE

Sweeney deferred to coach Jim Montgomery but let it slip that Zadorov is meant to complement McAvoy, who was easily the Bruins' most physical player last season. Paired with Zadorov, McAvoy will push the puck more confidently. If Boston's pro scouts are right, a more refined Zadorov will smartly use his 6-foot-6, 248-pound frame without piling up penalty minutes. At 29, he arrives at the same age as did Zdeno Chara, but out of respect, Zadorov insists no one calls him 'Big Z' in Boston. With 6-foot-6 Brandon Carlo, 6-foot-5 Mason Lohrei, 6-foot-4 Hampus Lindholm, 6-foot-3 Andrew Peeke and 6-foot-1 McAvoy, the Bruins' blueline averages 6-foot-4 and 219 pounds. Huge.

GOALTENDING

The Ullmark trade ends the recent goalie-tandem era in Boston, setting up Swayman for a Tuukka Rask-like workload. His support will come from journeyman Joonas Korpisalo, whose numbers suffered in Ottawa but were solid in Los Angeles and, at times, in Columbus. Bob Essensa is among the elite goalie whisperers, and rejuvenating Korpisalo is his next quest. If anything goes sideways, the Bruins believe they have an excellent late-blooming prospect in Brandon Bussi.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Sweeney anticipates Lindholm taking over the bumper position on a power play that was a middle-of-the-pack 21.2 percent in the playoffs. Teeing up Pastrnak for his Ovechkin-style one-timer is tiresome to watch when it isn't working. Lohrei's ability to improvise from the left point is the best Boston has seen since Torey Krug. On a penalty kill that clicked at 85.7 percent in the playoffs, Zadorov's reach will mitigate the loss of UFA Derek Forbort. Kastelic and Johnny Beecher are strong on defensive draws, and Marchand, Zacha and Coyle have the wheels to stress opposing power plays.

INTANGIBLES

At 36, Marchand is an outlier on a young team. The Bruins' win-now, win-always philosophy contradicts the standard teardown tactics of rebuilding, and until the Bruins are back in a conference final, there will be detractors. But Zadorov, Lindholm and Jones signed because peers who had played in Boston told them that what they'd heard about the experience is true: the Bruins are like a family, playing for one another and winning and losing together.

ROOKIES

Fabian Lysell has yet to make his NHL debut, but his second AHL season was trending up until he sustained a shoulder injury. Lysell and Georgii Merkulov (four NHL games) have a lot to prove.

X-FACTOR

The popular question is secondary scoring, but no perennial 50-win team has leaned as heavily on its goaltending as the Bruins during the goalie-hug era. Swayman boldly checks all the boxes, but a career contract and 50-plus starts constitute uncharted territory. If he gets injured, can Korpisalo step up?

THE BRASS

Sweeney keeps Boston competitive by identifying guys like Coyle, Zacha and Geekie and providing an environment where previously dormant players realize their potential. This skill mitigates a lack of draft capital, but the B's need more players whose games are suited for the playoffs.

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. Fabian Lysell
Pos RW Age 21
2023-24 Providence (AHL)
Fluid skater and pass-first winger has playmaking gift that can translate to an NHL power play.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

2. Dean Letourneau
Pos C Age 18
2023-24 St. Andrew's (CAHS)
Dominant at 6-foot-7 and 200-plus pounds. A nightmare to defend in tight or at full flight.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

3. Georgii Merkulov
Pos C Age 23
2023-24 Providence (AHL)
Offensive smarts make up for a lack of defensive acumen. An AHL-NHL tweener right now.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

4. Brandon Bussi
Pos G Age 26
2023-24 Providence (AHL)
Baby Bruins' No. 1 guided them to playoffs. Competes hard and is following steady trajectory.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

5. Elliott Groenewold
Pos D Age 18
2023-24 Cedar Rapids (USHL)
Nuts-and-bolts, defense-first blueliner. Reads plays well, then jumps in to break up attack.

BY BILL HOPPE

FOLLOWING TWO YEARS OF growth, the Sabres' regression last season cost coach Don Granato his job. Enter Lindy Ruff, who has returned to help the team he previously coached for 15 seasons end its league-worst 13-year playoff drought.

Ruff nostalgia runs deep in Buffalo. Having led the Sabres to the 1999 Stanley Cup final, four Eastern Conference finals and their last playoff berth, he's revered. The Sabres, who must sell tickets to a passionate fan base beaten down by losing, have featured Ruff on billboards. But the Sabres hired Ruff for more than marketing purposes. After falling short of expectations last season, GM Kevyn Adams cited a lack of accountability, something he believes the 64-year-old bench boss can fix.

The Sabres are under enormous pressure to end their embarrassing streak of missing the playoffs. Adams spent the off-season making moves to win right now.

OFFENSE

With the exception of JJ Peterka, all of the Sabres' top scorers endured down years last season. Tage Thompson, Jeff Skinner (who was bought out in June), Rasmus Dahlin, Alex Tuch, Dylan Cozens and Victor Olofsson combined for 192 goals and 436 points in 2022-23, when Buffalo's offense ranked third overall. Those six players compiled just 120 goals and 282 points last season, as the Sabres' offense dropped to 23rd. The power play was the main culprit. It was dreadful, costing them games while dropping from ninth in 2022-23 (23.4 percent) to 29th last year (16.6 percent). Adams added grit to the bottom six during the summer to make the Sabres tougher to play against.

TAGE THOMPSON

DEFENSE

The Sabres boast a deep and talented defense corps, with Dahlin, Owen Power and Mattias Samuelsson all capable of playing mega minutes. But that trio struggled last season, failing to make the same impact they did in 2022-23. Dahlin never reached his Norris-caliber potential but still tied for the team lead in scoring. Samuelsson, who battled injuries and played just 41 games, often showcased poor decision-making. Ditto for Power. Still, they all possess tremendous upside. Buffalo augmented its blueline by acquiring Bowen Byram, the fourth-overall pick in 2019, before the trade deadline. With Dahlin, Power, Samuelsson, Byram and Henri Jokiharju – a bright spot last season – the top defensemen are all 25 or younger.

GOALTENDING

After Devon Levi took over Buffalo's net, Ukko-Pekka Luukkonen became an afterthought, sitting out 13 straight games from late 2022-23 into early last season. But Luukkonen, once tabbed as the Sabres' goalie of the future, seized the opportunity when Levi and Eric Comrie sustained injuries, emerging as one of the NHL's best goalies in the second half of last season.

SPECIAL TEAMS

New assistant coach Seth Appert has taken over the power-play responsibilities from assistant Matt Ellis, who has been given different duties. With Dahlin quarterbacking and Thompson unleashing wicked one-timers from the circle, the Sabres have two premier talents on their top unit. But Dahlin's aggression sometimes leads to mistakes. And opponents have worked to nullify Thompson, who registered 11 fewer power-play goals last season. As a team, Buffalo scored 26 fewer goals on the man advantage. The penalty kill, led by Luukkonen's timely saves, improved from 28th to 13th.

INTANGIBLES

The Sabres have grown into a tight-knit group. Former captain Kyle Okposo wanted every player to be his own man, and players proudly point out the team has no cliques. With Okposo gone, Dahlin, an alternate captain, will likely earn the 'C.' The 24-year-old is a voracious worker and a passionate voice. He's often out on the ice long before practice begins. He hates losing, and it's evident.

ROOKIES

The Sabres could start the season with zero rookies. Jiri Kulich, who has 51 goals in 119 games with Rochester over the past two seasons, might return to the AHL with Isak Rosen, another first-rounder entering his third North American pro year. The Sabres also have 2024 No. 14 overall pick Konsta Helenius, who stood out in the Liiga as a 17-year-old center.

X-FACTOR

Adams methodically rebuilt the Sabres, refusing to take any shortcuts. Instead of quick fixes, he tried to set the team up for consistent success. But the Sabres have matured and entered a new phase. There are playoff expectations, and if the team falls short, there could be another regime change.

THE BRASS

Coaches on a second stint with a team usually don't enjoy their previous success. Adams believes that Ruff, who has won in different eras utilizing different styles, can accomplish what the six coaches who followed his first stint couldn't and push the Sabres into the playoffs.

BY STEVE MACFARLANE

NOBODY IS EXPECTING TOO much from the Flames this season. That's what happens when you trade away your top center and half of your starting defenders mid-season, then deal your starting goalie before the draft. They may call it a retool, but it's more aligned with a full rebuild. Gone are Jacob Markstrom, Elias Lindholm, Andrew Mangiapane, Noah Hanifin, Nikita Zadorov and Chris Tanev. Flames GM Craig Conroy was cautious in free agency as well, bringing in reclamation project Anthony Mantha as the top acquisition.

Playoffs? Anything is possible, but they're unlikely. The prospect cupboard is full, however, after a 10-player draft chock-full of solid prospects. Top pick Zayne Parekh will get a long look in camp. The future is the focus.

>OFFENSE

Mantha was brought in on a one-year deal specifically in the hopes of helping to rejuvenate former 100-point winger Jonathan Huberdeau, who has plunged off a cliff in his two seasons with the Flames while his former Panthers have appeared in back-to-back Stanley Cup finals and won it all last season. Perhaps the biggest move was signing 26-year-old winger Yegor Sharangovich to an extension. He's a good bet to lead the team in goals for a second straight season. Nazem Kadri (75 points), Blake Coleman (30 goals) and rookie Connor Zary were other bright spots up front. But if the Flames are to surprise anyone, they'll need a repeat strong showing year from Andrei Kuzmenko and lots of support from defensemen MacKenzie Weegar and Rasmus Andersson. There's also a lot of young players sprinkled throughout the lineup who will need to contribute. Can they find the chemistry?

DEFENSE

When you turn over as many high-end defenders as the Flames have in the past year, there are going to be growing pains. The Flames are hoping Weegar and Andersson will lead the way and that UFA signing Jake Bean can come in and make an immediate impact. Daniil Miromanov showed promise on the power play in his 20 games after a trade brought him to town. That quartet might form the top four for the squad this season. Kevin Bahl, Joel Hanley and Brayden Pachal are the leading depth candidates.

GOALTENDING

With a lack of proven defensive depth, the goaltenders are going to earn their paycheques. And Calgary doesn't have 2022 Vezina Trophy finalist Markstrom to do the heavy lifting. By trading Markstrom, the Flames have paved the way for Dustin Wolf to play a lot. Backup Dan Vladar is coming off hip surgery, and Calgary also added Devin Cooley as insurance. Basically, it is Wolf's crease to lose. His NHL appearances have been inconsistent thus far, but this is the opportunity he's been waiting for.

SPECIAL TEAMS

The power play was abysmal early last season, but it really turned around as the year went on. A big reason for that was the addition of Kuzmenko before the trade deadline. He helped spark the group, as did the swap from Andersson to Weegar on the point. Calgary's man advantage was third-worst in the league before the trade deadline and third-best the rest of the way. They'll be looking to pick up where they left off. The penalty kill went the opposite way, starting the year well but going off the rails after the Flames lost most of their top penalty-killers before the trade deadline. It could get messy this year as they look for the right fits.

INTANGIBLES

The Flames are getting younger, and the opportunity for prospects to make their mark can be viewed as a positive. It doesn't mean much for winning games in the short term, but the group will be looking to develop chemistry. The hope is that veteran leaders such as captain Mikael Backlund, Huberdeau and Kadri can remain positive despite being stuck in a rebuild. It's all a bit fragile.

ROOKIES

The Flames' best shot at a Calder Trophy this year is Wolf, but backing this rebuilding squad is going to be tough on the numbers. Most of the team's other talented young players, such as Zary and Matt Coronato, are no longer rookie eligible, so any real rookie excitement would have to come as a surprise out of training camp – perhaps someone such as 19-year-old defenseman Hunter Brzustewicz.

X-FACTOR

There are many candidates, including bounce-back hopeful Huberdeau and young right winger Coronato. But the biggest key to exceeding expectations is a stellar season from Wolf. The rookie goaltender has a clear path to the No. 1 job, but is he ready for it?

THE BRASS

Conroy has done a nice job in his first full year at the helm. He inherited a tough situation but has made some solid trades and signings with a focus on rebuilding with draft capital and young prospects.

ERIC BOLTE-USA TODAY SPORTS

BY LUKE DECOCK

THE WINDS OF CHANGE swept through the Hurricanes this summer, not unexpectedly, as a salary-cap-provoked restructuring saw veteran stalwarts Brady Skjei, Brett Pesce and Teuvo Teravainen depart along with deadline rental Jake Guentzel, who the Hurricanes had hoped to re-sign.

A reckoning was coming after a team with massive expectations fell short in the playoffs for the third year in a row. While the team's macro window to contend remains open with Sebastian Aho, Andrei Svechnikov, Seth Jarvis and Jaccob Slavin at its core, one micro window closed, and it may be a minute before another opens. Just how long will be up to new GM Eric Tulsky, the team's longtime analytics guru who was promoted after Don Waddell left for Columbus. With the way the Hurricanes make decisions – collectively – that's not as big of a change as it might be elsewhere, but Tulsky inherited a long to-do list.

>OFFENSE

Aho, Svechnikov and Jarvis will continue to be the main offensive threats, with Jordan Staal anchoring one of the league's most dominant lines, even if it doesn't always have the production to show for it. Some pieces will change around them, with Jesper Fast recovering from whiplash and incoming free agents Jack Roslovic, William Carrier, Eric Robinson and Tyson Jost providing depth. Jack Drury emerged as a capable third-line center, but Carolina needs more from Jesperi Kotkaniemi. Martin Necas is, at least temporarily, out of the rumor mill after the speedy, skilled restricted free agent signed a two-year extention in late July. The Hurricanes have always been a quantity-over-quality offensive team, prioritizing possession and shot volume. That's worked in the regular season but not as well in the playoffs.

DEFENSE

The biggest changes are on the blueline, where Pesce and Skjei were integral parts of what had been arguably the league's deepest defense. The Canes added Sean Walker and brought back Shayne Gostisbehere to replace them, but whether that's like-for-like remains to be seen. A perennial strength is now a question mark. The Hurricanes still have their top pairing of Slavin and Brent Burns, capable of going up against the NHL's best, and the useful duo of Dmitry Orlov and Jalen Chatfield. It's a versatile, puck-moving group without a marquee star, although Slavin deserves more Norris Trophy consideration than he gets.

GOALTENDING

It will be a changing of the guard in net as Pyotr Kochetkov's role increases and Frederik Andersen's recedes. Andersen has been the No. 1 for three seasons, but durability has been an issue for him. The fiery Kochetkov, who made the NHL's all-rookie team, saved the Canes' season in December and will get the chance to play as much as he can handle this time around. Carolina is always a two-goalie team, but he's the nominal No. 1.

SPECIAL TEAMS

For several years, this has been one of the top teams both on the power play and penalty kill… in the regular season. Both units have struggled in the post-season to various degrees – a flaw that has too often proven fatal. Teravainen was a key component on both the PP and PK, and someone must step up to fill those roles. With one of the NHL's most aggressive shorthanded units, the Hurricanes continue to be dangerous while a man down. The power play has shown steady improvement as Aho and Svechnikov have matured, but Carolina could use more firepower on the blueline as Burns ages.

INTANGIBLES

In this season of transition, the leadership of longtime captain Staal and potential successor Aho will be tested, because so many of the constants who the Canes have relied upon for years are gone. This has been a franchise on the cusp of a Stanley Cup for a few years without breaking through, and a step back would be understandable. At least there's never any doubt about the effort level of a Rod Brind'Amour-coached team.

ROOKIES

If D-man Scott Morrow starts in the AHL, he's unlikely to stay there all season. Another top 'D' prospect, Alexander Nikishin, will be in the NHL soon. It's just a question of when Carolina can get him out of Russia.

X-FACTOR

For a team that's piled up regular-season wins without winning a single game in the conference final, these changes may be a welcome catalyst. If Kochetkov steps up in net and players like Drury and Kotkaniemi flourish in expanded roles, the Canes may not miss a beat.

THE BRASS

Tulsky worked for two GMs and built one of the NHL's most highly regarded analytics staffs before getting to run the show. But it's not a one-man band. There are several other voices in the mix, including Brind'Amour, assistant GM Darren Yorke and owner Tom Dundon.

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. Alexander Nikishin
Pos D Age 22
2023-24 St. Petersburg (KHL)
Arguably KHL's best two-way defenseman was named team captain last year. All-star potential.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

2. Bradly Nadeau
Pos LW Age 19
2023-24 Maine (HE)
Hobey Baker nominee is slight but has shown puck skill and production. Turned pro last season.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

3. Scott Morrow
Pos D Age 21
2023-24 UMass (HE)
Great skater with top-unit power-play quarterback upside. AHL seasoning will help with details.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

4. Dominik Badinka
Pos D Age 18
2023-24 Malmo (Swe.)
Strong second half buoyed draft stock of mobile blueliner. Can stretch the ice with passing.
Expected NHL Arrival '28-29

5. Gleb Trikozov
Pos LW Age 20
2023-24 Omsk (Rus.2)
Good numbers in lower-tier Russian circuits. Next test is producing in North American pro game.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

The puck skills, playmaking and hockey sense are there. Skating is all that's holding him back.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

7. Felix Unger Sorum
Pos RW Age 19
2023-24 Leksand (Swe.)
Knack for finding and hitting fine passing seams. Could use bulk. No rush to get him to NHL.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

8. Jackson Blake
Pos RW Age 21
2023-24 North Dakota (NCHC)
Tied for fourth in NCAA scoring before inking pro deal. Natural scorer will go to tough areas.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

9. Jayden Perron
Pos RW Age 19
2023-24 North Dakota (NCHC)
Just 5-foot-9, but speed and slipperiness are his weapons. Will benefit from more time in NCAA.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

10. Noel Fransen
Pos D Age 18
2023-24 Farjestad Jr. (Swe.)
Transitioned well to pro game. Brings offensive talent and skating ability, but he needs to add size.

BY MATT CARLSON

DESPITE THE ARRIVAL OF Connor Bedard, the 2023-24 season was a painful one in Chicago. The 18-year-old No. 1 overall pick in 2023 and eventual Calder Trophy winner delivered 22 goals and 61 points – along with some memorable plays – in 68 games. But the Blackhawks were thin on talent to begin with, then decimated by injuries. Taylor Hall, acquired to skate on Bedard's wing, had season-ending ACL surgery in November, and it got worse from there. Even Bedard wasn't exempt, missing 14 games with a broken jaw. The Hawks finished 31st with a 23-53-6 record. The loss total set a franchise record. Chicago's 178 goals were fewest in the NHL.

On the bright side, Chicago has plenty of terrific prospects, especially on defense. To tide the team over immediately, GM Kyle Davidson signed eight UFAs – led by wingers Tyler Bertuzzi and Teuvo Teravainen – on July 1. Bedard has more help, and the Hawks will be better.

OFFENSE

It all starts with Bedard. He played most of last season with winger Philipp Kurashev, who broke out for 18 goals and 54 points. Teravainen – who returns to the place he started his NHL career after eight seasons in Carolina – and Bertuzzi are solid top-six forwards. Both topped 20 goals last season and figure to get more ice time. Hall, the 2017-18 Hart Trophy winner, has rehabbed hard to prove he's still a top-six guy at 32. Jason Dickinson was a shutdown center last season and scored a career-high 22 goals. Expect some production as well from Ilya Mikheyev, acquired from Vancouver, along with Nick Foligno and a healthy Andreas Athanasiou. Davidson also bolstered the bottom six by bringing in UFAs Craig Smith and Pat Maroon and re-signing Joey Anderson.

SETH JONES

>DEFENSE

Seth Jones is one of the league's big minute-munchers, averaging 25:29 last year. Mobile and smart Alex Vlasic, 23, made huge strides in his first full NHL season and was locked up with a six-year, $27.6-million deal. Connor Murphy returns, plus there's more veteran stability with the arrivals of UFAs T.J. Brodie and Alec Martinez. There's also smooth-skating Kevin Korchinski, who has great acceleration and offensive skills. But the 20-year-old needs more seasoning in a structured setting.

>GOALTENDING

Petr Mrazek had a resurgent season in 2023-24. The 32-year-old bounced back from two years of debilitating core injuries to play a career-high 56 games with a 3.05 goals-against average and .907 save percentage. He was rewarded with a two-year, $8.5-million contract. Mrazek will have a capable backup, as Laurent Brossoit inked a two-year, $6.6-million pact after being the No. 2 to Connor Hellebuyck in Winnipeg. Brossoit's arrival allows 25-year-old Arvid Soderblom, who was overwhelmed in the NHL last year, a chance to work on his game in AHL Rockford.

>SPECIAL TEAMS

Led by right-shot Bedard, Chicago will have better options on the power play with lefties Teravainen and Bertuzzi. Bedard topped rookies with 206 shots last season but has shown he can dish as well as snipe with his sneaky release. Teravainen is slick on the man advantage, while Bertuzzi can drive to the net. From the point, Jones must shoot more consistently. Vlasic has good wheels, but he needs to hit the net when shooting the puck. The penalty kill could be a bright spot, led by Dickinson and Anderson.

>INTANGIBLES

There's no shortage of passionate leadership from Foligno. At 36, he rebounded with more ice time (17:46) and answered the call with 17 goals and 37 points on a team that desperately needed him. No one wore the 'C' in Chicago last season following Jonathan Toews' departure, but Foligno served as the de facto captain.

>ROOKIES

Chicago signed defenseman Artyom Levshunov, the No. 2 pick in the 2024 draft. Fast and strong as a freshman at Michigan State last year, the 6-foot-2, 208-pounder will have a chance to show what he can do in training camp. More likely candidates on the blueline, however, are Ethan Del Mastro, Wyatt Kaiser and Nolan Allan. Speedy center Frank Nazar scored in his first NHL game last April after completing his sophomore NCAA year with Michigan, and Landon Slaggert was solid after joining from Notre Dame.

>X-FACTOR

Two key questions to consider: how much will Bedard improve with better linemates and depth around him? And how will Lukas Reichel, a 2020 first-rounder, respond after he struggled in the NHL last year and was sent to the minors?

>THE BRASS

Chairman and CEO Danny Wirtz has asserted himself as the fourth-generation family boss of the franchise. Davidson, the league's youngest GM at 36, is showing he can guide the Hawks both with talent acquisition and salary management.

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. Artyom Levshunov
Pos D Age 18
2023-24 Michigan State (Big Ten)
Poise with puck on offense. Strong and stable on defense. Nearly good enough for NHL duty already.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

2. Oliver Moore
Pos C Age 19
2023-24 Minnesota (Big Ten)
Speed to burn and plenty of offensive tools. Projects as pass-first producer at highest levels.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

3. Sacha Boisvert
Pos C Age 18
2023-24 Muskegon (USHL)
Highlights of all-around game are speed, passing and active stick. Committed to North Dakota.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

4. Frank Nazar
Pos C Age 20
2023-24 Michigan (Big Ten)
Does the little things to create time and space. Had three-game NHL cameo at end of last season.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

5. Marek Vanacker
Pos LW Age 18
2023-24 Brantford (OHL)
Plays with pace, and work ethic is apparent. Shot power and release are hallmarks of his game.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

Pos G Age 20
2023-24 Green Bay (USHL)
Impressed in consecutive WJC showings. Uses mobility and flexibility to cover space in a hurry.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

7. Sam Rinzel
Pos D Age 20
2023-24 Minnesota (Big Ten)
Slight, rangy 6-foot-4 defender uses stick to break up plays, but he could be more physical.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

8. Colton Dach
Pos C Age 21
2023-24 Rockford (AHL)
Adjusted well to AHL in rookie pro season. Excellent shot and makes good use of his big frame.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

9. Ilya Safonov
Pos C Age 23
2023-24 Kazan (KHL)
Production dipped, but valuable middle-six piece has grown into leadership role with KHL club.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

10. John Mustard
Pos C Age 18
2023-24 Waterloo (USHL)
Goes to high-danger areas, whether it's around or through defenders. Has lacked consistency.
Expected NHL Arrival '28-29

BY COREY MASISAK

IT WAS FRAMED AS a Stanley Cup-or-bust season from the opening day of training camp. It went bust in what felt like a blink of an eye.

The Avalanche spent most of 2023-24 as a no-doubt Cup contender. Valeri Nichushkin's suspension in the hours before a critical Game 4 in the second round against Dallas ended that. Colorado nearly dragged the Stars into a winner-take-all seventh game, but former Avs center Matt Duchene scored the series-clinching goal in double overtime of Game 6.

Colorado's core remains elite, but two huge questions will define 2024-25 and possibly beyond. Will captain Gabriel Landeskog finally come back from a knee injury that has cost him two full seasons? Will Nichushkin make the life changes he needs while in Stage 3 of the NHL/NHLPA player assistance program? Both players are total wild cards – and under contract through at least 2029.

>OFFENSE

The Avalanche scored the most goals in the regular season and fired 24 pucks past Vezina Trophy winner Connor Hellebuyck in five games of a first-round rout. Nathan MacKinnon hit 50 goals for the first time and set a franchise record for points (140) en route to his first Hart Trophy. Cale Makar established a new franchise mark for points by a defenseman (90) for a second time in three seasons. Mikko Rantanen reached 100 points for the second straight season. Jonathan Drouin set a career high with 56 points, then returned on a team-friendly one-year deal. If even one of Landeskog or Nichushkin is close to his old self, the Colorado offense will again be terrifying.

CALE MAKAR

DEFENSE

Nichushkin and Artturi Lehkonen are two of the NHL's best two-way wingers. And Drouin was one of the best stories in the league last year, not only because of his offense but how he evolved into a trusted 200-foot player as well. The Avalanche like to play defense before the puck reaches their own end, either by keeping it or by killing transition plays before they develop. Makar's speed, positioning and stick are key in snuffing out opposition attacks, while Devon Toews is one of the league's best defensive defensemen. Samuel Girard and Josh Manson played well together last season. Trading Bowen Byram and then losing his replacement (Sean Walker) could hurt, but the Avs found some intriguing bargains to shore up the depth beyond the top six on the blueline.

GOALTENDING

Alexandar Georgiev had a rough finish to the regular season and then yielded seven goals in Game 1 of the playoffs against Winnipeg. Had Justus Annunen not been sick, he might've started Game 2. Instead, Georgiev authored a remarkable turnaround and further won over his coach and teammates. A full year with Annunen as his backup should give Georgiev more rest in the regular season, but he wants the net, and coach Jared Bednar doesn't mind giving him a heavy workload.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Drouin made a big impact from the bumper position on the PP. Nichushkin would've given Edmonton's Zach Hyman a run for best net-front presence had he not missed time in Stage 2 of the player assistance program. MacKinnon, Makar and Rantanen make any configuration of the top PP unit scary. Colorado's penalty kill was improved last season, finishing just outside the league's top 10, up from 17th in 2022-23.

INTANGIBLES

The Avs lost significant leadership when Andrew Cogliano and Zach Parise retired and Jack Johnson signed with Columbus. If Landeskog can play, the Avalanche will get back one of the best leaders in professional sports. Landeskog is a guy who even superstars such as MacKinnon and Makar look up to. And the return of Logan O'Connor, a younger heart-and-soul guy in the making, after season-ending hip surgery will also be a boost.

ROOKIES

Right winger Nikolai Kovalenko made his NHL debut in the playoffs. He could be a bowling ball of chaos in the bottom six. Sam Malinski showed well in a small sample size last year and will battle newcomers Calvin de Haan and Erik Brannstrom for a spot on the third 'D' pairing.

X-FACTOR

Nichushkin is suspended until at least mid-November, while Landeskog's timeline is TBD. If both return reasonably close to their previous form, the Avs will be a Stanley Cup favorite by April. If one comes back, they'll be a very good team. But if neither returns, the Avs will need to scramble to replace them or it will be a "gap year" before another reload for 2025-26.

THE BRASS

Bednar likes to lean on his top players, which might be especially necessary early in the year. GM Chris MacFarland has proven he's not afraid to cash in future chips to help a title run right now, though the war chest is a little light after years of going for it.

BY BRIAN HEDGER

AFTER YET ANOTHER SUMMER of change, the Blue Jackets head into a new season with the most likely outcome being a fifth straight year without a playoff berth.

There were seismic shifts in Columbus, beginning with the hiring of former Carolina GM Don Waddell to replace both president of hockey ops John Davidson and GM Jarmo Kekalainen. Waddell fired coach Pascal Vincent, traded Alexandre Texier, bought out Adam Boqvist and left Jake Bean without a qualifying offer. He also juggled a raft of free agents and hired a new coach in Dean Evason, who faces a big cleanup. And Waddell still must deal with Patrik Laine's trade request made while he was still in the NHL/NHLPA player assistance program. The team also added UFAs Sean Monahan and Jack Johnson.

OFFENSE

The Blue Jackets only had Laine for 18 games due to two long-term injuries and his entry into the NHL/NHLPA program. His absence created a huge void, but Columbus still boosted its scoring rate from 2.60 goals per game in 2022-23 (30th in the NHL) to 2.85 (24th) under Vincent – who was forced into the coaching role by Mike Babcock's pre-season resignation. Johnny Gaudreau's numbers have plummeted since inking a seven-year deal in July 2022, and it took Zach Werenski most of last season to shake off the rust from shoulder surgery and become a goal-scoring defenseman again. Adding Monahan, Gaudreau's former linemate in Calgary, could spark a rebound for Gaudreau. The Blue Jackets also have a core group of maturing forwards – starting with Adam Fantilli, Kent Johnson, Cole Sillinger and Kirill Marchenko – several of whom could produce breakout seasons.

COLUMBUS BLUE JACKETS

ZACH WERENSKI

>DEFENSE

Once again, the Blue Jackets have as many questions as answers after allowing 3.63 goals per game, which was second-worst in the league. Most important is figuring out a consistent partner for Werenski, which Columbus hasn't had since trading Seth Jones to Chicago in 2021. Will it be Damon Severson, the only right-handed veteran with the requisite mobility? Will promising sophomore David Jiricek be forced into a role he's not prepared to handle? Or what about Erik Gudbranson? The odds favor Severson, but he's better suited to a second-pairing role with Ivan Provorov. Look for Jiricek to slot into that spot instead, while Gudbranson shares the third pairing with a combination of Jack Johnson and rookies.

>GOALTENDING

Assuming Elvis Merzlikins and Daniil Tarasov can stay healthy, they'll again be the Jackets' tandem. Tarasov is experienced enough to challenge Merzlikins for the starting role, while Merzlikins has more to prove after taking small steps forward last season. He has three years left on a contract with a $5.4-million annual charge against the salary cap and hasn't played up to that level. Jet Greaves continues to impress with AHL Cleveland.

>SPECIAL TEAMS

Since joining the league, the Blue Jackets have finished in the NHL's top 10 on the power play just once in 23 seasons. They've finished in the top 15 on five occasions, most recently 12th in 2016-17, and have only ranked in the top 25 once in the past seven years. Last season, they sputtered to 31st overall with a listless 15.1-percent efficiency. Laine's absence created a void, but putting him and Gaudreau together wasn't working anyway. The hope is that adding Monahan may spark Gaudreau, but it remains a safer bet to keep expectations low. On the penalty kill, Columbus traded Texier, one of its top PK forwards, from a roster that finished at just 76.3 percent.

>INTANGIBLES

The Jackets cited "culture" as a reason Vincent was fired. Vincent, however, did most of the things former coach Brad Larsen was alleged not to have done enough, such as establishing accountability via ice time. And yet the "country club" tag persisted. That makes the Columbus "culture" issue feel more like a roster failure than a coaching problem. But that's now a headache for Evason – the Blue Jackets' fourth coach since April 2023 – to solve.

>ROOKIES

There's no Fantilli equivalent this year in Columbus. Cayden Lindstrom, drafted fourth overall in June, will likely return to WHL Medicine Hat. Forwards James Malatesta and Luca Del Bel Belluz and blueliners Denton Mateychuk and Stanislav Svozil will push for NHL work.

>X-FACTOR

The only way the Blue Jackets could surprise is if Gaudreau rebounds, the defense plays better than expected and multiple young forwards enjoy breakout seasons. Getting Werenski back to top scoring form would also help.

>THE BRASS

It is Waddell's show after Davidson, who fired Kekalainen, accepted a shift into a senior advisory role. Rick Nash, director of player development, has begun transitioning into a more visible role that may lead to a bigger promotion.

FUTURE WATCH

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. Cayden Lindstrom
Pos C Age 18
2023-24 Medicine Hat (WHL)
Throwback power forward punishes opponents physically and on scoresheet. Skates well, too.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

2. Denton Mateychuk
Pos D Age 20
2023-24 Moose Jaw (WHL)
Top WHL blueliner captained Warriors to league crown. Great distributor and power-play QB.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

3. Gavin Brindley
Pos C Age 19
2023-24 Michigan (Big Ten)
Skilled, pugnacious and plays bigger than 5-foot-9 frame. Finished in top 10 in NCAA scoring.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

4. Charlie Elick
Pos D Age 18
2023-24 Brandon (WHL)
Big, mobile defender uses size to bully oncoming attackers. Likely a shutdown 'D' at top level.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

5. Jordan Dumais
Pos RW Age 20
2023-24 Halifax (QMJHL)
Excellent at exploiting space. Work on skating has elevated his game – but it can improve more.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

6. Corson Ceulemans
Pos D Age 21
2023-24 Cleveland (AHL)
In and out of AHL lineup as he eased into pro game. Makes good use of his body in all three zones.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

7. Stanislav Svozil
Pos D Age 21
2023-24 Cleveland (AHL)
Up-and-down AHL year followed two dominant WHL seasons. High upside, but he needs time.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

8. Luca Del Bel Belluz
Pos C Age 20
2023-24 Cleveland (AHL)
Can produce in spite of so-so skating ability. Earned a one-game NHL cameo last season.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

9. Evan Gardner
Pos G Age 18
2023-24 Saskatoon (WHL)
Led WHL in GAA and SP in rookie season. Remains calm and composed while moving in crease.
Expected NHL Arrival '29-30

10. Guillaume Richard
Pos D Age 21
2023-24 Providence (HE)
He can chip in on offense, but his calling card is his defensive awareness. Entering senior year.

BY STEPHEN MESERVE

WITH DALLAS MAKING IT to the past two Western Conference finals but coming up short both times, the hunger could not be stronger for the Stars, and the feeling that they are oh-so close to breaking through is palpable. The corresponding excitement and expectations among fans are also notably high.

The Stars chose to stick with the same group of players up front and in net who took them to those conference finals, but they made major changes to the defense corps. It's hard to fault the reigning two-time GM of the Year, Jim Nill, when it comes to team construction, but as it is built today, the blueline is a step back from a unit that boasted Chris Tanev and Ryan Suter, despite the latter's buyout. The expectation is Stanley Cup or bust. With the Central Division becoming a knife fight, Dallas' path to repeat as regular-season conference champion will be that much more difficult.

OFFENSE

The scoring punch that made the Stars the NHL's third-best offense last season is mostly unchanged, with one notable exception: Joe Pavelski. While he regressed in terms of speed in the post-season and decided to retire, he still contributed 67 points in his final season, second-most on the team. The Stars hope to replace that offense with a full year from late-season call-up Logan Stankoven and AHL MVP Mavrik Bourque. Both tore up the minors and are expected to share a line in the NHL to continue their offensive ways. Though he would've been paid handsomely on the open market, Matt Duchene returned to the Stars on a team-friendly deal, which is a signal of the player's belief in what is being built in Dallas.

DEFENSE

The blueline is the biggest question mark for Dallas running it back. The Stars would not commit to the term Tanev or many other free agents desired, and they bought out Suter's final year. UFA signees Matt Dumba, Ilya Lyubushkin and Brendan Smith all landed in Texas on July 1, while the infrequently used Nils Lundkvist was re-upped. Dallas perhaps over-indexed on righties to ensure a good pairing for their elite lefty, Miro Heiskanen. With a handful of returnees, new signings and rookie prospects who could occupy a couple of depth spots, the Stars appear content to let training camp and the early season determine the roster, a common team philosophy over the years.

GOALTENDING

The plan in net for the next decade is 25-year-old Jake Oettinger, an elite stopper who any team in the league would love to have. The Stars solved the backup question with a three-year pact for Casey DeSmith after the team committed to an internal cap for the backup role and moved on from the well-liked Scott Wedgewood.

SPECIAL TEAMS

After ranking in the top 10 on both sides of the special-teams ledger in the regular season, the Stars completely fizzled when they needed it most against Edmonton in the playoffs. The Stars scored zero power-play goals, allowed a shorthanded tally and went 63.6 percent on the penalty kill. Steve Spott, who runs the power play, will be looked to for new ideas after the power outage. Can a player such as Stankoven step in for the departed Pavelski? Will Bourque get second-unit PP time? Could Dumba run a second unit with Thomas Harley? There are lots of questions.

INTANGIBLES

The culture in Dallas is immaculate thanks in large part to Pavelski. Dallas took on players such as Duchene and Suter because of his leadership example. Dallas now looks to the post-Joe era with an established hunger in its younger players and a knowledge it's been there before. This season is shaping up to be a significant one in terms of the transition from the Jamie Benn-Tyler Seguin era to a younger core.

ROOKIES

Stankoven – the AHL's rookie of the year last season – and Bourque appear ready to level up. Both have the game to make a significant offensive impact. Sturdy D-man Lian Bichsel may start the season in the AHL but is expected to contribute in the NHL as the season progresses.

X-FACTOR

The defense is the key question in the Stanley Cup push. Dallas did not get better on paper after Tanev left, so there will need to be a surprise performance or in-season moves, including call-ups, to keep the blueline an area of strength – or at least not an area of significant weakness.

THE BRASS

Nill plays a conservative, methodical chess game, allowing prospects to over-ripen and never overpaying in trades. Third-year coach Peter DeBoer has performed as expected, with regular-season success and playoff runs, but he lacks the biggest prize.

FUTURE WATCH

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. Mavrik Bourque
Pos C Age 22
2023-24 Texas (AHL)
Clever, creative playmaker led AHL in scoring. Reads game so well he can play at all strengths.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

2. Lian Bichsel
Pos D Age 20
2023-24 Rogle (Swe.)
Started in AHL but left for Sweden early in campaign. Hulking blue-liner can hammer the puck.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

3. Emil Hemming
Pos RW Age 18
2023-24 TPS (Fin.)
Sharpshooting winger not afraid to drive inside. Consistency will help him reach potential.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

4. Christian Kyrou
Pos D Age 21
2023-24 Texas (AHL)
At his best, he's a one-man zone exit. Stars will stay patient as he strengthens defensive play.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

5. Tristan Bertucci
Pos D Age 19
2023-24 Flint (OHL)
Could use bulk, but six-foot rear-guard uses what he does have to break up and shut down attacks.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

6. Aram Minnetian
Pos D Age 19
2023-24 Boston College (HE)
Patient puck-mover was sound defensively but struggled to impact offense as NCAA freshman.
Expected NHL Arrival '28-29

7. Gavin White
Pos D Age 21
2023-24 Texas (AHL)
Learning curve can be steep for young pros. White is working on defending at the next level.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

8. Matej Blumel
Pos RW Age 24
2023-24 Texas (AHL)
Blossomed with 30-goal, 60-point AHL output. It's the other side of the game that needs tuning.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

9. Brad Gardiner
Pos C Age 19
2023-24 Ottawa (OHL)
Two-way pivot is more conductor than catalyst. Acts as go-between for playmakers and scorers.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

10. Niilopekka Muhonen
Pos D Age 18
2023-24 KalPa Jr. (Fin.)
Physical attributes apparent, and he uses tools to play steady defense. Good breakout pass.
Expected NHL Arrival '29-30

BY BOB DUFF

THE 2023-24 SEASON WAS the best Hockeytown has witnessed in quite some time. The Detroit Red Wings came within a point of making their first playoff appearance since 2015-16.

Was it all smoke and mirrors, though? GM Steve Yzerman has patchworked with journeymen veterans the past couple of seasons, getting good results. But it could be that he's set the bar unrealistically high in terms of where his club is in the evolution of the so-called 'Yzerplan.' He has to start paying his young stars now, and big contracts to defenseman Moritz Seider and winger Lucas Raymond mean the club is in a salary-cap crisis. Key vets such as Shayne Gostisbehere and David Perron were let go. Going forward, the Wings must rely on younger players from within the system to step up. Might that mean a regression in the standings is coming? On paper, that outlook appears entirely plausible.

>OFFENSE

The Red Wings scored goals in bunches last season. Captain Dylan Larkin (33) and Raymond (31) each topped 30 tallies, and 13 players in total clicked for double digits. However, much of that offense packed up and left town over the summer. Free agents Perron (17 goals), Gostisbehere (10) and Daniel Sprong (18) departed. Robby Fabbri (18) and Jake Walman (12) were dealt. That's 75 goals leaving the team. Incoming are UFA winger Vladimir Tarasenko (23 goals) and defenseman Erik Gustafsson (six). That leaves quite a deficit to make up. The hope is that six-time 30-goal scorer Tarasenko trends upward and Patrick Kane, who scored 20 goals in 50 games after signing in late November, will be even more productive over a full season.

LUCAS RAYMOND

DEFENSE

Detroit gave up 273 goals, which ranked 24th overall. As the Wings were battling for a playoff spot, they allowed four or more goals in seven of their final 11 games. A team can't keep outscoring its problems forever, and the lack of defensive responsibility eventually caught up to the club. Midway through the season, the Wings dropped Walman from the top pairing and teamed veteran Ben Chiarot with 2021-22 Calder Trophy winner Seider. Late in the season, 2021 first-rounder Simon Edvinsson was summoned from AHL Grand Rapids and slotted onto the second pairing with Jeff Petry. Gustafsson will battle Justin Holl, Olli Maatta and rookie Albert Johansson for third-pairing minutes.

GOALTENDING

Journeyman Alex Lyon was the most consistent Detroit goalie. But his play, similar to that of James Reimer and Ville Husso, was merely average. Reimer wasn't re-signed. Injury limited Husso to just nine minutes after December. That led to the offseason addition of UFA Cam Talbot, who is coming off a strong season with Los Angeles. He holds the inside track to the No. 1 job.

SPECIAL TEAMS

The power play was a bright spot for Detroit. The Wings ranked ninth with a 23.1-percent success rate. However, this good news is tempered by the fact that two of the club's top four power-play performers – Gostisbehere (29 PP points) and Perron (17 PP points) – are gone. Keeping Kane and his ability to gain the zone and distribute the puck helps. Gustafsson is also being counted on to contribute. He has a big shot, and 27 of his 91 total points over the past three years have come on the power play. Detroit's penalty kill is also on the uptick. It went from 18th overall (78.3 percent) in 2022-23 to 14th (79.6 percent) last season.

INTANGIBLES

There was a noticeable change in the Red Wings' swagger after three-time Stanley Cup winner Kane joined the team. His on-ice vision made them a better club, and his team-first attitude was invaluable for a group still searching for playoff experience. Perron, now an Ottawa Senator, will be missed. He was a popular player and a vocal leader, both in the room and on the ice.

CUP ODDS

ROOKIES

Traditionally, the Wings like to slow cook their rookies. However, defenseman Johansson is no longer exempt from waivers. He isn't expected to be a star but will likely grow into a steady third-pairing defender.

X-FACTOR

Asking for more from players in their 30s such as Kane and Tarasenko could prove folly. The real X-factor could be Raymond. He took a huge step forward in production last season, his third in the NHL. The 2020 first-rounder scored 14 goals in Detroit's final 18 games.

THE BRASS

Yzerman admits he's outwardly feeling pressure for the rebuild to be showing more tangible progress. Coach Derek Lalonde, entering the final season of a three-year pact, needs to take the shackles off and let his skill players strut their stuff more often.

BY CAROL SCHRAM

AFTER COMING WITHIN A whisker of ending Canada's 31-year Stanley Cup drought, the Oilers are focused on taking another run at the title in 2024-25.

Connor McDavid's 42-point playoff performance further cemented his status as the NHL's best player, and he's on track to hit 1,000 career points early this season, before his 28th birthday. With his former agent, Jeff Jackson, now running the show as CEO of hockey ops, and his junior coach, Kris Knoblauch, calmly navigating the NHL playoff gauntlet on his first attempt, the Oilers are McDavid's team now more than ever.

His talent and determination, and the team-first mentality McDavid preaches, have suddenly turned Northern Alberta into a prime destination. Heading into 2024-25, the Oilers' roster is rife with title-hungry veterans looking for a chance to win. This year is all about unfinished business and bringing the championship experience to a new generation in Oil Country.

OFFENSE

Over the past two seasons combined, no team has scored more goals than Edmonton. In 2023-24, Zach Hyman's 54-goal breakout and Evan Bouchard's 82 points from the blueline augmented an already elite attack led by McDavid and Leon Draisaitl. New arrivals Jeff Skinner and Viktor Arvidsson will add even more firepower. Skinner, 32, is a six-time 30-goal scorer who's one year removed from a career-high 82 points. Arvidsson, 31, has also hit the 30-goal plateau twice, though he was limited to just 18 games last season – in which he scored six goals and 15 points – due to back surgery.

DEFENSE

Bouchard and Mattias Ekholm strike a near-perfect yin-yang balance on Edmonton's top pair. Both can log big minutes, and Bouchard's booming shot is a dangerous weapon from the blueline. Ekholm delivers penalty-killing smarts while dishing out thunderous hits and keeping the net-front clear for his goalies. With a strong performance in the playoffs, Philip Broberg has shown he's ready for a full-time role. And when he's at his best, Darnell Nurse can be a beast. Big Josh Brown is set to replace the departed Vincent Desharnais, but blueline depth remains a concern. Still, Knoblauch's new system has been effective: goals against dropped from 3.12 per game in 2022-23 to 2.68 after he took over last season.

GOALTENDING

After two seasons, the Jack Campbell era ended with a buyout, leaving hometown boy Stuart Skinner as the undisputed No. 1. In his second full NHL campaign, Skinner played 59 games in the regular season, then recovered impressively after a wobbly start to the playoffs. Calvin Pickard came in as Edmonton's backup. He shone in his first consistent NHL action in seven years, playing 23 games.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Edmonton's power play has been the stuff of legend for years. With McDavid and Draisaitl running the show and Hyman at net-front, that won't change this season. More notably, assistant coach Mark Stuart has assembled a penalty kill that rivals the best in the league. It was crucial to Edmonton's post-season success, giving up just four PP goals in the entire playoffs and outscoring Florida 2-1 while shorthanded in the Cup final. In addition to stalwarts Ekholm and Ryan Nugent-Hopkins, wingers Mattias Janmark and Connor Brown were also key on the PK.

INTANGIBLES

The new-coach bump when Knoblauch arrived was enormous. But without the same high-stakes drama as last year's climb from the depths of the standings, will he be able to keep his players engaged before the real test begins next April? Last season, the Oilers were also one of the healthiest teams. They're deeper this year, but a key injury or two could change the club's complexion. Defensive depth, particularly, remains a work in progress.

ROOKIES

Not technically a rookie, Broberg will likely be the only fresh face on a veteran-laden roster chasing a Stanley Cup. Local boy Matthew Savoie, picked up from Buffalo in a July trade, is now Edmonton's No. 1 prospect. At 20, he's most likely bound for AHL Bakersfield.

X-FACTOR

There's no doubt: the organization and its fans are hungry for a championship. And while we've seen NHL teams "learn to win," the pressure will ratchet up higher than ever this year. Looming over it all: the nagging distraction of Draisaitl and/or McDavid inching ever closer to free agency.

THE BRASS

Though they fell one win short of their ultimate goal, Knoblauch and Jackson crushed it in their rookie seasons in Oil Country. And when Ken Holland stepped down as GM just days after the final, Jackson came in and engineered one of the best free-agency periods in franchise history before naming Stan Bowman as GM in July.

FLORIDA PANTHERS

ALEKSANDER BARKOV

BY COLBY GUY

THE PANTHERS REACHED THE top of the mountain in 2024. Now, they'll attempt to defend their title. That will be a tough task for a core who has played more than 200 games over the past two seasons – losing in the 2023 Cup final to Vegas before beating Edmonton last season – and even more so after a UFA exodus that included Brandon Montour, Oliver Ekman-Larsson and Vladimir Tarasenko. But Florida has proven that it can win even in the most difficult of circumstances.

The Panthers began 2023-24 without star blueliners Aaron Ekblad and Montour, both of whom had sustained injuries during the 2023 playoffs. Nevertheless, Florida was one of the NHL's best defensive teams without the pair, and then ran away with the Atlantic Division title when they returned. And after a gauntlet of a playoff run through rivals Tampa Bay and Boston, the Presidents' Trophy-winning Rangers and finally the Oilers, the Panthers were champions for the first time.

OFFENSE

The Panthers return with their top eight scorers from last season. Sam Reinhart headlines the group after potting 57 goals in the regular season and another 10 in the playoffs. Aleksander Barkov, Matthew Tkachuk, Carter Verhaeghe, Sam Bennett and Evan Rodrigues round out one of the NHL's most potent top-six forward groups. Anton Lundell is another key player up front. Centering the third line, he was eighth on the team in points in the regular season before moving up to fourth in points in the playoffs. The Panthers could really use a big season from Lundell after he inked a six-year, $30-million contract.

DEFENSE

When teams poached their Cup-winning core in free agency, the biggest hit was on defense. Montour and Ekman-Larsson provided mobility and transition from the back end, which was key in the Panthers' quick breakouts. The good news is the top shutdown pair of Ekblad and Gustav Forsling is back. Still, Florida needs someone to step up next to Niko Mikkola. Veteran blueliner Nate Schmidt arrives on a one-year UFA deal, while undrafted Latvian defender Uvis Balinskis, 28, could be a candidate to break out.

GOALTENDING

Sergei Bobrovsky will get the bulk of the crease work once again after leading the Panthers to the Stanley Cup. That will likely be the case for the remaining two years of the mega-deal he signed back in 2019. But time will tell as to how long he can continue to play at a high level as he enters 2024-25 at 36. Spencer Knight is the likely frontrunner for the backup job, though Chris Driedger was brought in as insurance.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Florida suffered key losses on special teams during free agency. It lost both of its power-play quarterbacks in Montour and Ekman-Larsson, while center Kevin Stenlund was an important piece of one of the NHL's top penalty-killing units. On paper, the power play boasts a lot of talent, including the league leader in PP goals in Reinhart (27). Barkov, Tkachuk, Verhaeghe and Reinhart form a formidable unit, but someone such as Forsling will need to step up to replace Montour. The penalty kill is an easier fix. Barkov and Reinhart excelled together as a forward duo, and Lundell can slide in for Stenlund next to Eetu Luostarinen.

PERRY NELSON-USA TODAY SPORTS

INTANGIBLES

When it comes to intangibles, there are few teams better off than the Panthers. The core of this team has played in – and won – the most playoff games of any NHL franchise over the past two seasons. Chemistry, toughness and leadership are all qualities the Panthers have exhibited time and time again. And this is a young team. Rodrigues and Dmitry Kulikov are the only two players over the age of 30 who are locked beyond 2025-26.

ROOKIES

Mackie Samoskevich will get a longer look at the NHL level with Tarasenko moving on to Detroit. Samoskevich shined in the AHL, scoring 22 goals and 54 points in 62 games in his first pro season. Justin Sourdif is another candidate after 12 goals and 38 points in 58 AHL games last season.

X-FACTOR

The Panthers have the core in place to make another run at the Stanley Cup. It's just a matter of whether their depth and power play can withstand the losses in free agency. Forsling is a wild card on the power play, while Lundell will need to carry Florida's bottom six for them to be successful.

THE BRASS

GM Bill Zito took the free-agency losses on the chin and brought in depth pieces who fit the bill. The Panthers put a premium on physicality, speed and tenacious forechecking from the fourth line. Coach Paul Maurice will look to continue to bring the best of those qualities out of his players after winning the first Stanley Cup of his long and illustrious career.

BY DOUG WARD

IT WAS A SUMMER of alterations in Los Angeles, as the Kings unveiled a retro uniform that incorporates their sartorial history with an emphasis on the Wayne Gretzky era. Now, if they can find a way to tailor their roster so Stanley Cup holdovers mesh seamlessly with future stars, the Kings just might play as well as they look.

Los Angeles would happily leave its recent past behind. For the third straight season, Edmonton delivered a first-round knockout, and meaningful changes were in order. GM Rob Blake hit a triple with the swap of enigmatic center Pierre-Luc Dubois for veteran goalie Darcy Kuemper, addressing a problem in the dressing room, another in goal and yet another with the salary cap. Coach Jim Hiller's 21-12-1 record after taking over for Todd McLellan enabled him to ditch the "interim" label. Fashion is cyclical, and the Kings believe the same can be true for their time as a contender.

>OFFENSE

With the league's 17th-ranked offense (3.10 goals per game), the Kings landed in the middle of the pack. The team's emphasis on defensive responsibility over offensive firepower means they need to share the scoring load to win. A balanced attack is led by Adrian Kempe, who posted a career-high 75 points, along with Kevin Fiala (73 points) and Anze Kopitar (70 points). Southern California native Trevor Moore paced the team with 31 goals, while four other Kings – Fiala (29), Kempe (28), Kopitar (26) and Quinton Byfield (20) – reached the 20-goal plateau. Byfield's emergence bodes well for the future, as does defenseman Brandt Clarke's offensive prowess.

LOS ANGELES KINGS

DEFENSE

The Kings were once again among the league's elite teams defensively, allowing just 2.56 goals per game, third-best in the NHL. By employing a stifling 1-3-1 trap, the Kings have earned a reputation as a tough team to play against, a style to which Hiller has pledged allegiance. Hiller made it clear he sees the Kings' identity shaped by their defense-first ethos, so defensive responsibility remains a priority and won't be sacrificed in order to manufacture more scoring. Eight years removed from his Norris Trophy-winning season, Drew Doughty, 34, showed no signs of slippage, playing in all 82 contests and averaging 25:48 per game. Mikey Anderson, Doughty's defense partner, was solid defensively and chipped in 18 points.

GOALTENDING

Even with the throwback uniforms, we won't see the second coming of Rogie Vachon or Kelly Hrudey. But goaltending does not have to be a strength in the Kings' tight-checking system. Kuemper returns for his second stint in L.A., looking more like a leading man than the role player who appeared in 19 games back in 2017-18. Kuemper will get the majority of starts, with David Rittich slated for backup duty.

SPECIAL TEAMS

How do you judge a penalty kill that was second best in the league during the regular season, killing 84.6 percent of its shorthanded situations, but collapsed in the post-season? Against Edmonton, the Kings' PK yielded nine goals on 20 power plays over five games for an abysmal 55.0-percent kill rate. The power play was equally troubling in the post-season, unable to score a single goal against the Oilers after clicking at a respectable 22.6 percent during the regular season. Hiller & Co. must focus on ensuring the special teams are in top form for the post-season.

INTANGIBLES

With former local stars Blake and Luc Robitaille upstairs, the Kings have built a culture of taking care of their own. In Hiller, who played for the Kings in the '90s, they have a coach known for building relationships with players.

ROOKIES

Blue-chip blueline prospect Clarke, who made a splash when his first NHL goal was a breakaway overtime-winner in Boston, will have a full-time role. He has the offensive skills to make up for any deficiencies defensively. Akil Thomas and Alex Turcotte will also be counted on for depth scoring.

X-FACTOR

The next wave's continued emergence is vital for the Kings to return to relevance. If the young guns like Clarke, Byfield, Thomas and Turcotte can ascend to the height of their powers while veterans Doughty and Kopitar remain elite, the Kings could exceed expectations and win a playoff series for the first time since capturing the Stanley Cup in 2014.

THE BRASS

Deep-pocketed owner Philip Anschutz allows former players Blake and Robitaille to take care of the hockey ops and business, respectively, without overly worrying about financial costs. Over the summer, GM Blake hired Hiller as coach and found a way to unload Dubois' bad contract, which will help the cap crunch. Robitaille deserves kudos for a strong rebranding effort.

SERGEI BELSKI-USA TODAY SPORTS

BY SARAH MCLELLAN

DURING THE NEARLY 25 years the Wild have been chasing the Stanley Cup, they've established an identity as a team that is consistently competitive. But that changed dramatically in 2024-25.

Last season, they sputtered early, fired their coach and were sellers at the trade deadline. Although they were better in the second half, the Wild didn't have enough depth to contend, and they missed the playoffs for just the second time in 12 years.

In the off-season, the Wild tried to address some of their problems, but they were limited in what they could spend since almost $15 million of their budget is still being eaten up by the Zach Parise and Ryan Suter buyouts from 2021. This charge will drop significantly next summer, which is a light at the end of the tunnel that could make the interim feel like a stopgap. But after their decline, the Wild have plenty to prove in the meantime.

OFFENSE

The Wild's best players lived up to their billing. Kirill Kaprizov scored 46 goals, one shy of his career high. Joel Eriksson Ek reached 30, and Matt Boldy finished with 29. Together, the trio formed one of the NHL's most dangerous lines. But they had little support. The Wild were too top-heavy, and they buckled without reinforcements lower in their lineup. Marcus Johansson went from chipping in six goals as a 2023 trade-deadline pickup to tallying 11 across an entire season, while Frederick Gaudreau maxed out at five after scoring 19 in 2022-23. Since they couldn't sign an elite scorer, the Wild are hoping for bounce-back performances from their veterans.

DAN HAMILTON-USA TODAY SPORTS

DEFENSE

Injuries prevented the Wild defense from being the stabilizing force it's been in the past. Captain Jared Spurgeon was in and out of action before eventually undergoing season-ending hip and back surgeries. Jonas Brodin was also sidelined for a lengthy stretch. But those absences also opened the door for an unforgettable season from Brock Faber. The rookie took on more responsibility – including quarterbacking the power play – and his ice time soared. Without Faber's poise under pressure, the Wild would have been much worse off. He finished runner-up to Chicago's Connor Bedard for the Calder Trophy. If Faber avoids a sophomore slump and his 'D' mates stay healthy, this group could easily regain its stingy style.

GOALTENDING

Like the other positions, the Wild's goaltending was up and down. While Marc-Andre Fleury eclipsed 1,000 games and passed Patrick Roy to become the second-winningest goalie of all-time, Filip Gustavsson slumped. Fleury, 39, is back for his final season, and Gustavsson is under contract, so the Wild could give the duo a do-over – unless they promote top prospect Jesper Wallstedt. After struggling in his debut, Wallstedt rebounded to suggest he's ready for more NHL starts.

SPECIAL TEAMS

The power play improved under assistant coach Jason King. The highlight was rattling off four goals in a row during a 10-7 comeback against Vancouver. But the penalty kill was an eyesore. At one point, the Wild ranked lower than the worst PK in league history. They recalibrated enough to sidestep that notoriety, but their grim 74.5 percent stoked their swoon – so much so that the team signed defensive winger and PK specialist Yakov Trenin to a four-year, $14-million deal. Associate coach Jack Capuano, hired in the off-season, will work with the penalty-killers.

INTANGIBLES

A slow start and rash of injuries didn't just plummet the Wild down the standings. The adversity also chipped away at their identity. When the Wild are clicking, they're relentless on the puck, gritty along the boards and pesky near the net. They weren't last season, and rediscovering their swagger has been a focus. Trenin and Jakub Lauko, who was added in a draft-day trade with Boston, are known for being tough to play against.

ROOKIES

Wallstedt isn't the only prospect contending for a job. Left winger Liam Ohgren previewed his effectiveness during a four-game stint that included his first NHL goal and assist. And the experience that center Marat Khusnutdinov banked after leaving Russia to join the Wild in March should set him up for a seamless return.

X-FACTOR

Individual success stories are important, but the Wild need more than a few players to set the tone. Case in point: not even Kaprizov's top-10 goal output could salvage the season. The Wild are at their best when everyone is contributing.

THE BRASS

After firing coach Dean Evason in November and bringing in John Hynes, the Wild won more than they lost even though they didn't make the playoffs. Being in charge from the get-go gives Hynes a chance to continue the turnaround.

FUTURE WATCH

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. Jesper Wallstedt
Pos G Age 21
2023-24 Iowa (AHL)
Wild are taking their time with goalie of the future. Big, confident keeper isn't far off NHL crease.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

2. Zeev Buium
Pos D Age 18
2023-24 Denver (NCHC)
Power-play quarterback and mobile offensive blueliner. He's no slouch in his own zone, either.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

3. Danila Yurov
Pos RW Age 20
2023-24 Magnitogorsk (KHL)
Fast, fiery two-way player skated up and down the lineup. Played secondary role in KHL title win.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

4. Liam Ohgren
Pos LW Age 20
2023-24 Farjestad (Swe.)
Plays with pace, precision and doesn't shy away from physicality. Captained Sweden's WJC entry.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

5. Marat Khusnutdinov
Pos C Age 22
2023-24 Sochi (KHL)
Three-zone player ended last season in NHL after following steady upward trajectory in KHL.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

6. Ryder Ritchie
Pos RW Age 18
2023-24 Prince Albert (WHL)
Top-end speed and puck skills are exciting, but he sometimes has tunnel vision when dashing up ice.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

7. Charlie Stramel
Pos C Age 19
2023-24 Wisconsin (Big Ten)
Makes up for lack of high-end scoring by using size to create havoc. Checking center potential.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

8. Daemon Hunt
Pos D Age 22
2023-24 Iowa (AHL)
Rearguard bursts up ice to turn defense into offense. He's on the cusp of regular NHL minutes.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

9. Riley Heidt
Pos C Age 19
2023-24 Prince George (WHL)
Pesky pivot mixes impressive scoring with penchant for physical play. Nuisance to play against.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

10. Carson Lambos
Pos D Age 21
2023-24 Iowa (AHL)
Plays smart and simple game but isn't afraid to jump into the action. Bigger AHL role coming now.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

MONTREAL CANADIENS

NICK SUZUKI

BY STU COWAN

THE MONTREAL CANADIENS' rebuild will continue this season after the Habs missed the playoffs for the third straight year. A season-ending knee injury to center Kirby Dach in the second game last year threw a wrench into the rebuilding plans. Dach is expected to be ready to start 2024-25, but the big question is whether he can stay healthy.

After sending away late first-round picks to acquire Dach and Alex Newhook at the previous two drafts, the Canadiens chose to keep their powder dry this time around. Instead, they selected center Michael Hage at No. 23 after taking right winger Ivan Demidov fifth overall. Demidov has one year left on his KHL contract with St. Petersburg, while Hage is headed to the University of Michigan.

The fans in Montreal have been patient during this rebuild, and they will have to be patient again this season. A playoff spot is unlikely for a team that will again lack offense from its forwards.

OFFENSE

The Canadiens will once again be counting heavily on their No. 1 line of Nick Suzuki between Juraj Slafkovsky and Cole Caufield. The trio combined for 81 goals last season, and they were the only three Habs to hit the 20-goal mark. Mike Matheson is coming off a breakout year in which he posted 62 points to finish ninth among NHL defensemen. The Canadiens ranked 26th in offense but tied for fourth in goals by defensemen. Coach Martin St-Louis talks about "concepts" instead of "systems" and has to get more offense from his forwards – especially power winger Josh Anderson, who had just nine goals last season.

DEFENSE

The Canadiens have accumulated an abundance of prospect defensemen during their rebuild, and they still have veterans Matheson and David Savard, along with 2020 first-rounder Kaiden Guhle, who established himself as a full-time NHLer. The arrival of Lane Hutson will add more offensive punch. The June 30 trade of Johnathan Kovacevic to New Jersey opened a spot on the blueline, and there will be competition for jobs and ice time between Jordan Harris, Arber Xhekaj, Jayden Struble, Justin Barron and Logan Mailloux. Hutson and Mailloux made their NHL debuts at the end of last season.

GOALTENDING

There will no longer be a three-man rotation in the crease after Jake Allen was dealt to New Jersey at the trade deadline. Sam Montembeault, entering the first season of a three-year, $9.45-million contract ($3.15-million AAV), will be the undisputed No. 1, with Cayden Primeau as the backup. Primeau is heading into the final season of his contract and will push Montembeault for playing time.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Special teams have been a big problem for the Canadiens, who ranked 27th on the power play and 24th on the penalty kill last season. Assistant coach Alex Burrows, who was in charge of the power play, won't be back behind the bench after taking a new role as a player-development consultant. Suzuki, Caufield and Slafkovsky combined for 27 of the team's 44 power-play goals last year. Matheson had five goals and 28 points on the power play. Savard is a shot-blocking machine – averaging eight blocks per 60 minutes – especially on the penalty kill. Montreal ranked seventh in the NHL in penalty minutes, putting added pressure on the PK.

DAVID KIROUAC-USA TODAY SPORTS

INTANGIBLES

The players love playing for St-Louis. They respect the Hall of Famer and are buying into his modern concepts. GM Kent Hughes believes the team will grow "organically" under the leadership of captain Suzuki and be better because of continuity with the young players. This is a close-knit dressing room with the young players developing a brotherhood. Hughes also noted that injuries have been a major issue the past couple of seasons.

ROOKIES

Hutson will provide an offensive boost – especially on the power play – after putting up 30 goals and 97 points in 77 games over the past two seasons at Boston University. He had two assists in the two NHL games he played at the end of last season. His size – 5-foot-9 and 160 pounds – is a concern.

X-FACTOR

The No. 1 line has to keep producing, Dach must stay healthy, and Hutson has to show he can perform at the NHL level for the Habs to have any shot at the playoffs. Anderson also needs to deliver a rebound season with three years left on his contract at an annual $5.5-million salary-cap hit.

THE BRASS

Jeff Gorton, the executive vice-president of hockey operations, Hughes and St-Louis are all on the same page with the rebuilding plan and have the full support of ownership. It's a solid plan, but it will be at least another year until Montreal is a legitimate contender for a spot in the post-season.

BY DAVID BOCLAIR

THERE WAS A CERTAIN uncertainty about expectations for the Predators last year, their first season with Barry Trotz as GM. No one within the franchise talked about a rebuild, but that seemed to be the Preds' destiny before an 18-game point streak (16-0-2), beginning in mid-February, turned them into a playoff team.

There is absolute clarity this time after Trotz signed forwards Steven Stamkos (four years, $32 million) and Jonathan Marchessault (five years, $27.5 million), along with defenseman Brady Skjei (seven years, $49 million) in the opening hours of free agency. That trio joins a lineup that returns eight of its top 10 scorers, six of its top seven defensemen and its starting goalie.

This is a team that expects to win – and now.

>OFFENSE

Only two players ever have scored 40 goals for Nashville. Filip Forsberg did it twice (2021-22, 2023-24), and Matt Duchene did it once (2021-22). In Stamkos and Marchessault, the Predators added two players who did it last year. Stamkos hit the mark (40 goals in 79 games) for the seventh time in his 16-year career and the third time in the past six seasons. Marchessault scored a career-high 42 goals, the sixth time in eight seasons that he notched 25 or more. Those two combined with Forsberg and last year's big UFA additions, Ryan O'Reilly and Gustav Nyquist, give Nashville two bona fide scoring lines. That takes the pressure off of youngsters Tommy Novak, Cody Glass, Luke Evangelista and Philip Tomasino to produce consistently. Meanwhile, no NHL defenseman has more goals (88) or points (338) over the past five seasons than Roman Josi, who remains vital to Nashville's attack.

DEFENSE

Trotz still wants his team to be bigger and tougher overall on the blueline, but with the addition of Skjei (6-foot-3, 210 pounds), half of the Preds' top six are 6-foot-2 or taller and 210 pounds or heavier. Josi, of course, is the headliner after another stellar season in which he was the Norris Trophy runner-up and named a first-team all-star. The three-zone stud has taken more than 250 shots in four of the past five seasons. The decision to re-sign Alexandre Carrier (three years, $11.25 million) stabilizes the back half of the group, which includes Jeremy Lauzon, Dante Fabbro and Spencer Stastney, all of whom are 27 or younger.

GOALTENDING

Juuse Saros had been the subject of trade rumors for more than a year. Now, he has an eight-year, $61.92-million contract extension that starts in 2025-26. The deal came together weeks after 21-year-old Yaroslav Askarov, a scintillating prospect, struggled in the AHL playoffs (3.25 goals-against average, .882 save percentage). The 29-year-old Saros has led or tied for the lead among NHL goalies in games played in each of the past three seasons, and his .917 career SP is one of the best marks among active stoppers.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Stamkos is the kind of finisher Nashville has never had on its power play. He's scored 16 or more PP goals five times, including 19 last year. Nashville's franchise record is 16, by Duchene in 2021-22, and no one else has scored more than 14. The Predators' power play improved last season, its first under coach Andrew Brunette, with 14 more goals in just 19 more opportunities than the previous campaign. The unit's 21.6-percent success rate tied for second-best in franchise history. Any kind of backward step this season would be a big disappointment.

INTANGIBLES

Trotz has made no secret that he covets "serial winners." In 2023, he added one free agent who was part of Tampa Bay's back-to-back Stanley Cup teams in 2020 and 2021 (Luke Schenn) and one who was a Conn Smythe Trophy winner for another champion (O'Reilly with St. Louis in 2019). Trotz repeated that formula this summer with Stamkos, a two-time winner with Tampa Bay, and Marchessault, the Conn Smythe winner with Vegas in 2023.

ROOKIES

Askarov remains the Preds' most exciting prospect, but Saros' extension and the addition of veteran Scott Wedgewood (two years, $3 million) means the No. 11 pick in 2020 should expect to remain in the AHL and focus on development for most, if not all, of this season.

X-FACTOR

A year ago, Trotz challenged Forsberg to be Nashville's best player. The result was career highs in goals (48), assists (46) and points (94). Now, Forsberg must be even better and mesh his game with the high-profile newcomers rather than rely on them to carry the offense.

THE BRASS

In less than two years on the job, Trotz has looked much more aggressive and adaptable as a GM than he did as a coach. He said he didn't expect Stamkos to get to free agency but altered his plan at the last minute to land the two-time Rocket Richard Trophy winner.

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. Yaroslav Askarov
Pos G Age 22
2023-24 Milwaukee (AHL)
A standout everywhere he's played and destined to become an NHL starter. Off-the-charts athlete.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

2. Joakim Kemell
Pos RW Age 20
2023-24 Milwaukee (AHL)
Breakout year capped by near point-per-game playoff. Quick release and heavy, accurate shot.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

3. Tanner Molendyk
Pos D Age 19
2023-24 Saskatoon (WHL)
Patience with puck creates passing and shooting lanes. He's always looking to progress play.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

4. Egor Surin

CHANGES. THAT WAS THE story for the Devils in 2023-24. After a slow start doomed them to a slot near the bottom of the standings by mid-November, it was a constant uphill climb that featured key injuries, underachieving potential and missed opportunities. As the season went on, the Devils looked more and more different. A few trades, a fired coach, and suddenly, New Jersey was within sniffing distance of the final wild-card playoff spot. But it was not to be, as they missed the post-season by 10 points.

The disappointment led to an eventful off-season. The Devils traded for a big-time goalie, which they desperately needed, hired Sheldon Keefe as coach and are looking to return to the level of the 2022-23 team that finished second in the Metro Division. With good health and a little luck, they're a playoff team – and maybe more.

OFFENSE

Statistically, the Devils were a playoff-worthy club. They finished 12th in the NHL with 3.22 goals per game and had six 20-goal scorers (including Tyler Toffoli, who was traded at the deadline). Jesper Bratt led the way with a career-high 83 points. And they needed it, as blossoming superstar Jack Hughes missed 20 games with an injury that required season-ending surgery. Hughes still finished second on the team with 74 points in 62 games. The Devils also received solid production from Timo Meier (28 goals), Nico Hischier (67 points) and another 20-goal season from Dawson Mercer. Keefe likes to play it fast – his Toronto Maple Leafs finished second with 3.63 goals per game last season. That should provide a boost.

DEFENSE

The 62-game injury absence for top defenseman Dougie Hamilton really took its toll. A combination of injuries and mediocre goaltending saw the Devils finish 26th in goals against per game (3.43). New Jersey wasn't taking any chances this summer, adding veterans Brett Pesce and Brenden Dillon. They will nicely replace Kevin Bahl and John Marino, who left via trades. A key defenseman to watch is 21-year-old Luke Hughes. The former Michigan Wolverine was impressive in his rookie season, tallying 47 points in 82 games. Like his brother Jack up front, he's a game-breaker who can take the Devils to the next level with creativity, smooth skating and excellent vision.

GOALTENDING

Is there a team with more goalie issues over the past decade than the Devils? Each recent option played himself out of a roster spot and was traded over the past year. In comes Jacob Markstrom, who was acquired in the trade that sent Bahl to Calgary. He posted a solid .905 save percentage for a subpar Flames team last season. Markstrom was runner-up for the Vezina in 2022 and was 4th in 2020, but he's 34 now. He'll be aided by Jake Allen, who solidifies the veteran tandem.

SPECIAL TEAMS

The return of Jack Hughes and Hamilton will be monumental for the power play, which finished 13th at 22.5 percent last season. The penalty kill also took a big hit last season, dropping from fourth to 10th. Despite the skill they rolled out on the PK, including Hischier, Mercer, Hamilton and Ondrej Palat, the Devils tied for last with just three shorthanded goals. That needs to be better, as New Jersey was rarely able to swing a game when down a man. If they can improve on special teams, they'll improve their record and greatly enhance their playoff potential.

INTANGIBLES

Stop chasing the game. The Devils were terrible at the start of games, allowing the first goal 57 times, tied for third-most in NHL history. Outside of goaltending, this is the area that needs to improve most. The Devils have the tools to be a contender.

CUP ODDS

They're one of the fastest teams, have star power, an exemplary captain in Hischier and are now led by a successful regular-season coach in Keefe.

ROOKIES

Nolan Foote deserves some attention. The 23-year-old winger scored one goal in four games after missing most of the season due to injury. He scored 20 times in the AHL in 2022-23 and will get a real chance with the big club. Also watch out for former Michigan defenseman Seamus Casey, who's set to make his professional debut and could sneak into the NHL.

X-FACTOR

Goaltending. If the Devils are better in net and can improve on last season's paltry .886 SP, they're a completely different team. Markstrom should be able to do that, as the veteran brings a career .909 SP and 2.73 GAA to his new club.

THE BRASS

Keefe takes over after Lindy Ruff was fired and Travis Green stepped in as interim coach. He's well-known for his lack of playoff success, but so are the Maple Leafs as a whole. Under Keefe, Toronto was one of the NHL's best regular-season teams, going 212-97-40 over the past five years.

NEW YORK ISLANDERS

BY ALLAN KREDA

THE ISLANDERS MADE THE playoffs with a late surge under new coach Patrick Roy before falling to Carolina in the first round for the second straight year, this time in five games. Roy replaced Lane Lambert in late January after Lambert coached the team for less than two seasons following the departure of Barry Trotz.

Roy went 20-12-5 as the Islanders rallied to a third-place finish in the Metropolitan Division. Their up-tempo style and more aggressive tactics were a welcome tonic following the deliberate and risk-averse strategy under Lambert, who was 19-15-11 when he was dismissed.

Can the Islanders compete for supremacy in a division with loaded teams such as Carolina and the rival Rangers? As always, goaltending and special teams will be key.

>OFFENSE

The offense was led by three 30-goal scorers: Brock Nelson (34), Bo Horvat (33) and Kyle Palmieri (30). Meanwhile, Mat Barzal put up a team-high 80 points, including 23 goals, and captain Anders Lee chipped in 20 goals. Anthony Duclair signed a four-year contract on July 1, reuniting the 29-year-old winger with Roy, who coached him more than a decade ago with the QMJHL Quebec Remparts. Duclair scored 24 goals last season between San Jose and Tampa Bay. Horvat, signed through 2030-31, has been a stabilizing factor on faceoffs and at both ends of the ice since his acquisition from Vancouver in January 2023.

>DEFENSE

Defense was a constant strength during the Trotz/Lambert eras, and that trend should continue under Roy, the Hall of Fame netminder. Ryan Pulock and Adam Pelech provide a top-notch pairing as long as they can stay healthy. Each was limited to 58 games last season. Noah Dobson had another sterling campaign, contributing 10 goals and a team-best 60 assists. Scott Mayfield was hurt much of 2023-24, playing only 41 games, and his return will be key to solidifying the blueline. Alexander Romanov adds size and speed and was steady last season. Veteran Mike Reilly, claimed off waivers from Florida in November 2023, is back, and 23-year-old Samuel Bolduc could have an impact after playing 51 NHL games over the past two seasons.

NOAH DOBSON

GOALTENDING

Ilya Sorokin and Semyon Varlamov have been a solid tandem for the past four seasons, and that partnership will continue into 2024-25 and beyond. Sorokin, 29, is the starter but struggled late last year, leading to Varlamov playing more down the stretch. Sorokin was 25-19-12 with a 3.01 goals-against average, his highest GAA in four NHL seasons. Varlamov, 36, is signed through 2026-27, while Sorokin is starting an eight-year, $66-million contract. Veteran goaltending gives the Isles stability, but Sorokin needs to return to the elite form he showed in his first three seasons.

SPECIAL TEAMS

The top power-play unit is always a threat with Nelson and Horvat near the crease, Barzal creating plays and Dobson at the point. The second unit has promise with Lee, Jean-Gabriel Pageau and possibly Duclair in the mix with Pulock and his booming shot from the blueline. Fleet skaters Casey Cizikas and Pageau will be charged with turning around the 32nd-ranked penalty kill.

SERGEI BELSKI-USA TODAY SPORTS

INTANGIBLES

Loud fans at UBS Arena remain an asset for the Islanders, who have reached the playoffs twice in three seasons in their new home. The Islanders' core has long been together, and their families live close to the team's practice rink (near their former home at Nassau Coliseum) on Long Island. Those off-ice bonds surely help on-ice performance. Lee has been an excellent captain, and with veterans including lifetime Isles such as Nelson and Cizikas, there's no shortage in the leadership department.

ROOKIES

Maxim Tsyplakov, an undrafted Russian winger, is an intriguing addition. The 6-foot-2, 190-pounder scored a career-high 31 goals last year for Spartak Moscow, where he played parts of the past seven seasons. Other NHL teams were interested in the 26-year-old before the Islanders signed him to a one-year deal in May.

X-FACTOR

Barzal continues to elevate his game, and the 27-year-old needs to keep that going as he enters his eighth full NHL season. Barzal scored a career-high 23 goals last season, and his 80 points were second-most to the 85 he recorded in his 2017-18 rookie year. The playmaker needs to be at his best 5-on-5 and on the power play for the Islanders to excel.

THE BRASS

GM Lou Lamoriello continues to run the Islanders in trademark tight-ship fashion. He made a bold move by replacing Lambert behind the bench with Roy in January, a decision that injected fresh enthusiasm. The 58-year-old Roy is a four-time Stanley Cup winner – twice each with Montreal and Colorado – and players were clearly enthusiastic playing for the high-energy coach.

BY STEVE ZIPAY

THINGS WERE LOOKING BRIGHT on Broadway. After winning the Presidents' Trophy and ousting Washington and Carolina in the playoffs, the Rangers' management, players and fans believed there was enough gas in the tank to have a shot at a long-sought Stanley Cup. Instead, Florida rebounded from a 2-1 deficit in the Eastern Conference final and outplayed the Blueshirts to take the series in six games and advance to the Cup final.

For GM Chris Drury, that provoked a shuffling of the deck, which proved doubly challenging because his planning included a tight salary cap not just for 2024-25 but also for 2025-26, when three key players – goalie Igor Shesterkin, right winger Alexis Lafreniere and defenseman K'Andre Miller – will be due for extensions.

Added to the issue was friction between Drury and captain Jacob Trouba, who carries an $8-million cap hit for the next two seasons. A stalemate began in late June after he was asked to submit a no-trade list of 15 teams.

OFFENSE

The core scorers, led by Artemi Panarin (49 goals, 120 points), Mika Zibanejad, Chris Kreider and Vincent Trocheck delivered – especially on the power play – and 2020 No. 1 overall pick Lafreniere blossomed. But the first line was missing an effective right winger all season, the 5-on-5 numbers were disappointing, and the stars' ability to produce mostly disappeared in the playoffs. Barclay Goodrow, who scored six post-season goals, rejected a trade with three years left on his contract and was waived. Right winger Jack Roslovic and center Alex Wennberg, acquired at the trade deadline, left as UFAs. Kaapo Kakko, who has yet to produce the offense the Rangers envisioned when they chose him second overall 2019, signed a one-year extension. Meanwhile right winger Reilly Smith, 33, was brought in via trade and center Sam Carrick was signed as a UFA.

DEFENSE

The Trouba issue – should he stay or should he go? – leaves the Rangers' blueline at loose ends. Although the 30-year-old's play has diminished, and he's probably destined for a third-pair slot, he is a body-wrecker, dishing out resounding checks. Adam Fox remains the team's most effective offensive threat on 'D' and will again be paired with Ryan Lindgren. Miller had an inconsistent season, but he has been a solid match with Braden Schneider. Zac Jones, 23, is a puck-mover who chipped in two goals and nine points in 31 games and should see more action this season.

GOALTENDING

Shesterkin remains the clear No. 1, and a one-year extension for Jonathan Quick, who was terrific as a backup in his first season in New York, completes the tandem. Shesterkin, 28, one of the top-tier netminders in the NHL, was reportedly seeking about $13 million a season – or nearly 15 percent of the team's payroll – on a long-term pact. New York has little choice but to open the vault.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Special teams drove the Rangers to the Presidents' Trophy. The power play – led by Kreider's 18 goals, Zibanejad's 12 and 11 from each of Panarin and Trocheck – finished third (26.4 percent) in the regular season. The penalty kill also ranked third (84.5 percent) and had eight shorthanded goals, tied for 10th in the NHL. All the key figures will return, including Fox, who had 27 PP assists and led the team in average ice time at 23:27. Jimmy Vesey, a valuable forward on the PK, remains, but the unit will miss Goodrow.

INTANGIBLES

How will the team chemistry adjust to whatever happens with Trouba, who could agree to a trade, be waived or stick around and battle it out? Can Lafreniere continue his growth (28 goals, 57 points) and become a star? Will Smith be an effective top-six right winger? Can Filip Chytil stay healthy and return to form – and if not, who's the third-line center?

ROOKIES

Brennan Othmann, the No. 16 pick in 2021, will get a good look. Enforcer Matt Rempe (6-foot-7) needs some maturing, and Adam Edstrom (6-foot-7) also has size. Candidates for a depth slot on 'D' are Connor Mackey, Brandon Scanlin and Matthew Robertson.

X-FACTOR

If Lafreniere can score 35-plus goals and 70-plus points, that would be a game-changer. Two other elements could shift the dynamic: the fates of Trouba and Kakko, whose departures would free up cap space and perhaps add personnel.

THE BRASS

Former president and GM Glen Sather had been with the Rangers for 24 years. He retired in June at 80 after spending the past four years as special adviser to MSG owner James Dolan. Coach Peter Laviolette and his staff start a second season, but goaltending guru Benoit Allaire is cutting back his day-to-day duties. As director of goaltending, he's assisting the search for a goalie coach.

BY DILLON COLLINS

PATIENCE HAS RUN OUT in Canada's capital, and the time for excuses and platitudes has long passed. Gone are GM Pierre Dorion and coach D.J. Smith, replaced by Steve Staios and Travis Green.

New owner Michael Andlauer has his people in place. And after missing the playoffs for a seventh straight season, expectations are high for the Senators to wash off the stink of failure and make a run into the playoffs. Dorion-era acquisitions Joonas Korpisalo, Jakob Chychrun and Vladimir Tarasenko are out, replaced by 2023 Vezina Trophy winner Linus Ullmark, Stanley Cup winners David Perron (St. Louis in 2019) and Michael Amadio (Vegas in 2023) and right-handed defender Nick Jensen. Staios has addressed the club's three most pressing needs: upgrading the goaltending, acquiring a steady right-shot D-man and stocking the cupboards with bottom-six depth. The pieces are in place, but can the Senators supplant one of the Atlantic's big boys to grab a playoff spot?

>OFFENSE

The forward corps remains largely intact for the '24-25 Senators. Captain Brady Tkachuk led the team with 37 goals and 74 points, supported by rising star Tim Stutzle, sniping winger Drake Batherson and beloved veteran Claude Giroux. Josh Norris, Shane Pinto and the still blossoming Ridly Greig round out Ottawa's more potent offensive weapons. The team addressed its lack of depth by signing UFA veterans Perron and Amadio and the well-rounded Noah Gregor. When healthy and motivated, the Senators have the makings of one of the more dangerous offensive units in the NHL.

DEFENSE

There has long been a logjam on the left side of the blueline and a glaring need for a right-shot defenseman. Staios did well to address that concern in the off-season, flipping Chychrun to Washington for the veteran Jensen. While Jensen, 34, lacks Chychrun's offensive upside, he's versatile, composed and sure-footed in the 'D' zone, which are exactly the traits the back end has lacked. Expect Jake Sanderson to take another stride toward star status, with Thomas Chabot chewing up heavy minutes alongside the durable Artem Zub. Tyler Kleven, Jacob Bernard-Docker and Travis Hamonic will battle for third-pairing roles.

GOALTENDING

Have the Sens answered their long-looming goaltending question? The tandem of Korpisalo and Anton Forsberg was among the worst-ranked in the NHL last season in both save percentage and goals-against average. In response, Staios landed perhaps the biggest fish in the goalie trade market with the acquisition of Ullmark, flipping Korpisalo, gritty center Mark Kastelic and a first-rounder to division rival Boston. Ullmark, 31, provides much-needed stability as the clear-cut starter, with Forsberg serving as a respectable backup and AHL Belleville ace Mads Sogaard waiting in the wings. They don't need a savior, just a save.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Ottawa finished 23rd in the NHL on the power play (18.0 percent). While the club will miss Chychrun and his 16 power-play points, they'll gain some traction with the addition of Perron, who had seven PP goals and 17 PP points last season with Detroit. The PK ranked a lowly 29th (75.1 percent), though at least the Senators managed to score seven shorthanded goals. The new cadre of assistant coaches – Nolan Baumgartner, Ben Sexton, Mike Yeo and Sens legend Daniel Alfredsson – along with Jacques Martin, the senior advisor to the coaching staff, will be relied upon to turn around both units.

INTANGIBLES

The team went a long way in adding significant character to their dressing room during the off-season. Giroux will no longer have to shoulder the burden of veteran status on his own thanks to the arrivals of Perron, Amadio and Jensen. All are steady, versatile hands who will help guide a young team.

ROOKIES

Kleven, an imposing defender, suited up for 17 games with Ottawa in his first two seasons as a pro. He was a steady presence with offensive upside in Belleville last season, putting up 21 points in 53 AHL games. Up front, Angus Crookshank, 24, and Zack Ostapchuk, 21, will contend for roster spots.

X-FACTOR

In the past two seasons, the Sens have lost footing in the playoff race almost as soon as it had begun. Ottawa started 5-8-1 in '22-23 and 6-7-0 in '23-24, with seven of those 15 losses coming to division rivals. A hot start is key for Green's squad if they're going to earn their first playoff berth since 2017.

THE BRASS

Make no mistake, it is Staios' team now. He is Andlauer's man through and through, and he has an opportunity to bring positive change to a franchise that has too long dwelled in the NHL's basement. Another failure may result in a shake-up of established core players.

PHILADELPHIA FLYERS

TRAVIS KONECNY

BY WAYNE FISH

DESPITE BEING PROJECTED FOR a low finish by many NHL pundits, the Flyers maintained a playoff spot for 124 days. Then an eight-game losing skid in late March and early April knocked them out of contention.

The unexpectedly early signing of 2023 first-rounder Matvei Michkov – who managed to get released from a KHL contract that had two years remaining – to an NHL deal has raised hopes in Philadelphia of ending a four-year playoff drought. The decision not to re-sign goalie Carter Hart – whose playing status remains unknown after he was charged with sexual assault for an alleged 2018 incident – leaves the door open for Samuel Ersson and Ivan Fedotov. GM Daniel Briere's commitment to the rebuilding plan has given the fan base cause for optimism.

OFFENSE

Travis Konecny led the Flyers' offense with career-best totals in goals (33) and points (68). On defense, Travis Sanheim established career highs in goals (10), assists (34) and points (44). For a second straight season, Philadelphia's goal total increased. This was noteworthy because the Flyers finished 32nd on the power play, clicking at barely 12 percent. The arrival of Michkov and a second season for 20-goal rookie Tyson Foerster should help put more pucks in the net. Another reason for optimism: the Flyers had a dozen players hit double-digit goals, and 11 of them are back this season. The offense is trending up.

DEFENSE

There's plenty of mobility on the blueline but also a lack of size. Regulars Jamie Drysdale, Cam York and Egor Zamula are all 200 pounds or under. York and Sanheim are used quite a bit in important situations. The Flyers decided to re-sign veteran Erik Johnson to provide leadership both on and off the ice. Philadelphia is hoping that a year of experience for Zamula, along with hopefuls Ronnie Attard and Adam Ginning, will pay off. Rasmus Ristolainen is coming back after undergoing surgery to repair a ruptured triceps tendon. The team needs his physical presence, especially in the defensive end. The Flyers had a positive goal differential for much of the season, then slumped and finished minus-26.

GOALTENDING

Until Fedotov receives appreciable playing time, it's difficult to say in which direction the goaltending is headed. In a brief three-game NHL trial last season, he showed flashes of his form from the KHL. Ersson held his own after taking over the starting job when Hart left the team in the middle of the season. On paper, Ersson, 24, is the No. 1, at least until training camp and preseason action. If Fedotov, 27, proves to be all he's cracked up to be, the netminding is in good hands – but that's a big "if" hanging over the Flyers' crease in the meantime.

SPECIAL TEAMS

It's safe to say the Flyers need a bounce-back year from Sean Couturier, who returned last year after missing a season-and-a-half due to a pair of back operations and wasn't quite himself down the stretch. Couturier will be a key if the Flyers are to keep killing penalties at a high rate (fourth in the NHL at 83.4 percent last season). As for the power play, it certainly won't hurt to have Michkov on the ice as much as possible. A not-so-overworked Sanheim should also be helpful. Getting more shots on net would be a useful strategy.

INTANGIBLES

The Flyers named Couturier captain in February after going nearly two seasons without one, and that move helped in the leadership department. Almost making the playoffs last year should be a motivating factor this time around. Konecny getting an 'A' shows he's a big part of the team's nucleus. The Flyers are a young team looking for direction, and veterans such as Scott Laughton, Garnet Hathaway and Johnson figure prominently in that area.

ROOKIES

The only freshman practically guaranteed a spot on the roster is Michkov. He's impressed scouts with his mobility and high hockey IQ. On defense, Emil Andrae has turned in some impressive work with AHL Lehigh Valley. But it would take several injuries for him to make the jump.

X-FACTOR

The Flyers don't have enough depth to overcome a slew of injuries, especially if they happen to key players such as Konecny, Sanheim or Foerster. Philadelphia needs continued production from Owen Tippett, Joel Farabee and Morgan Frost and for secondary scorers such as Noah Cates and Bobby Brink to improve on last year's totals.

THE BRASS

Last season showed that governor and CEO Dan Hilferty's decisions to hire Briere as GM and Keith Jones as president of hockey ops were wise ones. The Flyers generally overachieved, earning wins over every team except Nashville, and they're looking to raise more eyebrows this year.

BY SHELLY ANDERSON

FOR THE SECOND YEAR in a row, the Penguins find themselves walking the line between retooling around a star-powered-but-aging core and going full rebuild.

The Penguins, in their second off-season under president of hockey operations and GM Kyle Dubas, primarily addressed lineup depth after missing the playoffs for the second straight spring. The main players – centers Sidney Crosby and Evgeni Malkin and defensemen Kris Letang and Erik Karlsson, along with a handful of secondary stalwarts – are charged with getting back to the post-season and then accelerating to contender status a season or two beyond.

Dubas traded winger Reilly Smith, but the rest of the top-six forward group remains intact. Defenseman P.O. Joseph was allowed to leave via free agency, replaced by UFA signee Matt Grzelcyk. A trade netted veteran center Kevin Hayes. Beyond that, Dubas primarily brought in depth pieces Anthony Beauvillier, Sebastian Aho and Blake Lizotte – all on short-term deals – and stockpiled some extra draft picks for the next couple of years.

OFFENSE

Crosby, who turned 37 in August, showed he's still among the very elite, leading the Penguins last season with 42 goals and 94 points while playing all 82 games, but he was left to carry the team for stretches, especially after his left winger, Jake Guentzel, got shipped out at the trade deadline. Malkin, 38, was inconsistent and started to show erosion in his dominating style, but he still had 27 goals and 67 points. Top-six winger Bryan Rust had 28 goals, but injuries have become a concern after he missed 20 games to three separate issues. Karlsson, acquired in the blockbuster trade of the 2023 off-season, contributed 56 points, but that was little more than half the 101 he had in winning the Norris Trophy the previous season with San Jose. There will be some new names to help provide depth scoring, and a couple of prospects could break through, but there are a lot of ifs – just as there were a year ago.

EVGENI MALKIN

DEFENSE

Marcus Pettersson, playing primarily with Karlsson, was the Penguins' steadiest defenseman. The rest of the pairings are in flux with Ryan Graves coming off a discombobulated first season in Pittsburgh, Grzelcyk added to the mix, Joseph leaving and young players such as Jack St. Ivany, Ryan Shea and John Ludvig faring well as rookies last season. Karlsson and Letang were prone to occasional costly lapses, and the overall team defense needs to improve. Pittsburgh ranked around the league's midpoint in goals against and had trouble all season holding onto leads.

GOALTENDING

Somewhat surprisingly, the Penguins are sticking with the status quo. Tristan Jarry was supplanted as the No. 1 down the stretch by Alex Nedeljkovic, who likely missed out on better offers to re-sign. Jarry, who got a five-year deal last summer, enters the season as the starter on paper but could be on a short leash. Minor-leaguer Joel Blomqvist appears close to being NHL-ready.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Pittsburgh's power play was decidedly nothing special, defying its talented personnel to finish 30th in the NHL at 15.3 percent and allowing 12 shorthanded goals, which tied for most in the league. That performance resulted in the firing of associate coach Todd Reirden. Former San Jose coach David Quinn, the new assistant, will take over the power play. The penalty kill was adequate at 80.7 percent, tied for 10th overall. Some of the PK's key personnel, such as forwards Noel Acciari, Lars Eller, Drew O'Connor and Rust, are back, but there will also be some new faces, with the bottom six seeing some turnover.

CUP ODDS

INTANGIBLES

The Pens may be at the point where even Crosby's unparalleled leadership can't overcome a lack of high-end talent to lift the team into the playoffs.

ROOKIES

Mortgaging the future for years as part of a win-now approach has hurt the pipeline, but in center Brayden Yager, defender Owen Pickering and goalie Blomqvist, the Penguins have prospects who could successfully matriculate to the NHL in 2024-25.

X-FACTOR

Crosby's contract status could affect the team's psyche. He's eligible to become a UFA next summer and didn't immediately sign an extension when it became allowable.

THE BRASS

Dubas needs to prove himself to the fans. Coach Mike Sullivan likewise runs the risk of falling out of favor. Perhaps Quinn can not only improve the power play but also get the most out of Karlsson after coaching him in San Jose. It's unclear if or how the departure of executive David Beeston from ownership group Fenway Sports Group will affect FSG's oversight. Beeston appeared to be heavily involved in the group's hockey interest.

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. Brayden Yager
Pos C Age 19
2023-24 Moose Jaw (WHL)
High-IQ pivot reads and reacts, attacking holes and producing. Good shot and 200-foot game.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

2. Owen Pickering
Pos D Age 20
2023-24 Swift Current (WHL)
Always looking to join the rush. Made defensive strides thanks to long reach and strength.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

3. Tanner Howe
Pos LW Age 18
2023-24 Regina (WHL)
Lacks size, not heart or competitive fire. Well-rounded, two-way game and offensive skill set.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

4. Harrison Brunicke
Pos D Age 18
2023-24 Kamloops (WHL)
Projectable size paired with fluid skating stride. He's improved with each passing season.
Expected NHL Arrival '28-29

5. Ville Koivunen
Pos LW Age 21
2023-24 Karpat (Fin.)
Key piece in Jake Guentzel trade. Broke out in Finland and contributed immediately in AHL.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

6. Joel Blomqvist

BY LOU KORAC

FOR THE FIRST TIME since 2011, the Blues failed to qualify for the playoffs in back-to-back seasons, but they won't deviate from their plan of building from within and getting younger by doing so.

The Blues improved last year – going 43-33-6 – but fell short of the post-season by seven points. GM Doug Armstrong continues to preach patience and insists the team wants to be competitive while retooling a roster that only picked up depth pieces.

St. Louis re-signed Pavel Buchnevich to a six-year, $48-million extension, which keeps the left winger in town through 2031, and acquired depth forwards Alexandre Texier from Columbus, Radek Faksa from Dallas and Mathieu Joseph from Ottawa. The team also signed Joseph's younger brother, defenseman P.O. Joseph, who was not tendered a qualifying offer from Pittsburgh. In addition, veteran coach Claude Julien was brought in as an assistant on Drew Bannister's staff.

>OFFENSE

Robert Thomas set career highs in goals (26), assists (60) and points (86) to lead the team last season, becoming the first Blues player since Craig Janney (68 in 1993-94) with 60-plus assists. Despite a slow start, Jordan Kyrou (31 goals) surpassed the 30-goal plateau for the second straight year. Buchnevich had 63 points and has scored at least 26 goals in all three seasons in St. Louis. Veteran center Brayden Schenn (20 goals in 2023-24) has scored 20 or more in five of seven years with the Blues. St. Louis has a deep forward group, even after trading Kevin Hayes to Pittsburgh at the draft.

COLTON PARAYKO

DEFENSE

There was significant improvement here, going from allowing 3.63 goals per game in 2022-23 to 3.02 last season. A lot of the credit goes to the top pair of Colton Parayko and Nick Leddy. Justin Faulk was limited to just 60 games due to injury, and he scored a career-low two goals. Torey Krug could miss the season due to a pre-arthritic condition in his left ankle, leaving Scott Perunovich, Matthew Kessel, Tyler Tucker and Joseph to battle for a top-four slot and fill out the bottom pair.

GOALTENDING

Jordan Binnington bounced back to go 28-21-5, his most wins since he won 30 games in 2020. His goals-against average of 2.84 was his lowest since 2020-21 (2.65), and his save percentage (.913) was his best since his rookie season in 2018-19. Joel Hofer was capable in his first full NHL season, going 15-12-1 with a 2.65 GAA and .914 SP. Binnington and Hofer will return as the tandem for a second straight year.

SPECIAL TEAMS

St. Louis' power play and penalty kill have fallen sharply since being the only team to rank in the top five in each category in 2021-22. The power play dropped to 24th last year (18.0 percent), while the penalty kill was 18th (79.1 percent). Thomas, Kyrou and Buchnevich need to be catalysts on the power play, while the arrivals of Texier, Faksa and Mathieu Joseph will help the penalty kill.

INTANGIBLES

While keeping with the desire to incorporate more draft picks into the lineup, the Blues remain in a competitive mode and addressed the need for veteran leadership with their off-season trades and additions. Schenn, Parayko, Faulk, Thomas and Krug remain the leadership group. Right winger Kasperi Kapanen, brought back on a one-year, $1-million contract, and Faksa are the only potential UFAs for 2025. Armstrong said he wanted the Blues to get bigger and faster and did so with the off-season additions.

ROOKIES

Will forwards Zack Bolduc and Zach Dean become full-time NHLers after each got a taste last year? Bolduc had five goals and nine points in 25 games in 2023-24. And will Dalibor Dvorsky, the No. 10 pick in the 2023 draft, make his big-league debut this season? He racked up 45 goals and 88 points in 52 games with OHL Sudbury after coming over from Sweden, where he had zero points in 10 games with Oskarshamn in the SHL.

X-FACTOR

Binnington showed once again that he can carry a team on his shoulders, and his play will go a long way in determining whether St. Louis returns to the playoffs this time around. His 16.5 goals saved above expected placed him fifth among NHL stoppers, according to moneypuck.com.

THE BRASS

Entering his 15th season as GM, Armstrong signed a three-year extension to remain with the organization through 2029 but will move solely into the position of president of hockey operations, relinquishing the GM duties to former Blues stalwart Alexander Steen, who will take the role starting in 2026. Bannister, meanwhile, had the "interim" tag removed from his title when he signed a two-year contract in May.

SAN JOSE SHARKS

BY CURTIS PASHELKA

THE 2023-24 SHARKS MIGHT have been the worst team in the NHL's salary-cap era. Not only did San Jose trade the previous season's leading point-producer (Erik Karlsson) and goal-scorer (Timo Meier), but captain Logan Couture missed 76 games with a groin injury and Tomas Hertl was dealt to Vegas at the deadline.

With a thin roster, the Sharks finished last in the NHL in goals against (3.98 per game) and goal differential (minus-146) and second-last in goals scored (2.20 per game). Feeling the team needed a new voice after finishing with a record of 19-54-9, GM Mike Grier fired David Quinn, who went 41-98-25 in two years in San Jose.

The Sharks' total teardown, though, appears to be over. After winning the draft lottery and selecting center Macklin Celebrini, a potential franchise player, with the No. 1 pick in June, optimism has returned to the team's fan base.

OFFENSE

Projected to play significant minutes as a rookie, perhaps even as the Sharks' No. 1 center at some point this season, Celebrini figures to play an integral role, as could fellow top prospect Will Smith. But the Sharks need returning veterans such as Couture and Mikael Granlund and free-agent additions Tyler Toffoli and Alexander Wennberg to support Celebrini and Smith. Toffoli, who has scored a combined 67 goals over the past two seasons, could be a fit on Celebrini's line. Grier is hopeful Couture will be ready in the fall and that Fabian Zetterlund and William Eklund can continue their upward trajectories. Zetterlund scored a team-high 24 goals, and Eklund had 45 points in 80 games in his first full NHL season.

DEFENSE

One of the greatest challenges facing new coach Ryan Warsofsky is fixing the Sharks' porous defense, which he co-ordinated during the past two seasons. In 2023-24, San Jose allowed a league-high 226 goals during 5-on-5 play. Warsofsky, the youngest coach in the NHL at 36, promises a less passive approach to defending now that he's calling the shots. The Sharks made two notable personnel changes: they acquired Jake Walman (and a 2024 second-round pick) from Detroit and sent Kyle Burroughs to Los Angeles for left winger Carl Grundstrom. Walman chips in offense, can play top-pair minutes and joins Mario Ferraro, Marc-Edouard Vlasic and Henry Thrun on the left side. The right-shot defensemen include Jan Rutta, Matt Benning and Ty Emberson. Left-shot Shakir Mukhamadullin will also vie for a roster spot.

GOALTENDING

Mackenzie Blackwood remains the Sharks' No. 1 goalie after posting a respectable (relatively speaking) .899 save percentage last season. His backup will be Vitek Vanecek, who needed surgery after missing the final two months of 2023-24 with a lower-body injury. Vanecek hopes to regain the form he showed in 2022-23, when he had 33 wins and a .911 save percentage in 52 games for New Jersey. Magnus Chrona and Georgi Romanov are the depth options in the AHL.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Additions such as Toffoli, Celebrini, Wennberg, Smith and a healthy Couture should bolster a power play that ranked 21st in the NHL at 20.2 percent last season when Eklund and Zetterlund combined for 14 PP goals. The Sharks could go with five forwards on the first unit, or they could have Walman act as the quarterback. San Jose ranked 28th on the penalty kill last year (75.4 percent) but has brought in some PK help in Wennberg, Walman, Barclay Goodrow and Ty Dellandrea.

INTANGIBLES

The Sharks' biggest task is not just winning more games but also creating an environment in which their top prospects can properly develop despite what will likely be another trying year. Grier feels he's added players, such as Cup-winning vets Toffoli and Goodrow, who will help establish a tough-to-play-against identity. Warsofsky must get everyone on the same page despite the continued roster churn.

ROOKIES

Celebrini and Smith are sure bets to make the roster and, perhaps, contend for the Calder Trophy. On defense, Mukhamadullin might be able to earn an NHL job or at least be in a position to be the first call-up from the AHL when an injury occurs.

X-FACTOR

The Sharks have some added firepower but need to cut back on goals against, particularly at even strength, to have a chance at improving. A healthy Couture and stable goaltending will help the Sharks defy oddsmakers, who have Team Teal finishing in the cellar again.

THE BRASS

Owner Hasso Plattner, 80, pops in and out of public view. He's entrusted Grier, now in his third season, to orchestrate the rebuild. The GM continues to take a methodical approach and isn't making any declarations about when the next playoff appearance might happen.

PERRY NELSON-USA TODAY SPORTS

BY GEOFF BAKER

AFTER MISSING THE PLAYOFFS in 2023-24 thanks to a 19-point year-over-year decline, the Kraken embarked on an ambitious summer to change the dynamic and how they're perceived in a crowded Seattle sports market. They fired coach Dave Hakstol and replaced him with AHL counterpart Dan Bylsma. They ditched their regional sports network partner in favor of producing their own "free" broadcasts. And they committed $94 million to two players in the opening hours of free agency. That's revived interest in a team that's fallen short of envisioned market inroads in its first three seasons.

As for on-ice moves, the additions of defenseman Brandon Montour and center Chandler Stephenson should make the Kraken instantly more competitive while facilitating the progress of young center Matty Beniers and prospects such as defenseman Ryker Evans and center Shane Wright. There is renewed hope in Seattle.

OFFENSE

A sophomore slump by Beniers and injuries to right winger Andre Burakovsky limited the Kraken to a fourth-worst 2.61 goals per game. Adding Stephenson affords the option of dropping Beniers to second-line duty, where he won't always face the opponents' best players. It – along with Wright breaking into the NHL full-time – also improves a notable weakness at center after the March trade of Alexander Wennberg. Team MVP Jared McCann has led the club in scoring all three seasons and can now slide back into his customary spot at left wing. Montour's arrival along with Vince Dunn and the promising Evans gives Seattle's blueline a dangerous offensive punch.

DEFENSE

Montour's addition more than offsets the UFA departure of Justin Schultz and maintains a lefty-righty balance on all three pairings. Seattle was already one of the tougher defensive teams to face, allowing the ninth-fewest goals per game at 2.83, and Montour makes a group with Dunn, Adam Larsson, Jamie Oleksiak and the aggressive Will Borgen even more physical. The puck-moving defense corps will be expected to ignite the offense, and all three pairings can now do that with power-play candidates Dunn, Montour and Evans. Dunn had the second-most points on the team in 2022-23 and third-most last season despite missing most of the final six weeks with a neck injury.

GOALTENDING

Joey Daccord emerged as the new No. 1 last season during Philipp Grubauer's injuries, though they'll battle for that mantle in training camp and likely into the opening month. Daccord's stellar play allowed the Kraken to bid adieu to UFA Chris Driedger. Still, only midway through a six-year, $35.4-million deal, Grubauer showed improvement in the latter part of 2023-24 after his injuries were afforded time to heal. If competition with Daccord elevates Grubauer's play to that previously shown in Colorado, this has the makings of a good tandem.

SPECIAL TEAMS

The power play was a perpetual liability, leading to the departure of assistant coach Paul McFarland. Longtime NHL assistant Bob Woods has been brought in to revive it, helped by Jessica Campbell, who'd previously worked with the Kraken's AHL Coachella Valley affiliate on their highly productive power play. Montour's addition will give the team two well-quarterbacked PP units, while Stephenson will again take pressure off Beniers. Stephenson and Montour will also help a penalty kill that's improved under assistant Dave Lowry the past two seasons.

INTANGIBLES

The Kraken gave two-fisted Coachella Valley winger John Hayden a one-way contract with a shot at fourth-line duty. His addition alongside Montour will help the Kraken avoid getting pushed around as often by opponents. Right winger Jordan Eberle signed a two-year extension and could become the franchise's first captain since Mark Giordano was traded in March 2022.

ROOKIES

While not technically a rookie, 2022 No. 4 overall pick Wright is ready for full-time NHL action. And Evans, who saw sporadic duty last season, has a shot at either the second or third defense pairing.

X-FACTOR

Rebounds by Beniers and Burakovsky would replace much of the missing offense. Still, it could be moot if Daccord suffers a regression after his breakout season. But if he proves he's more than a three-month mirage, Seattle might remind folks why it was a win away from the Western Conference final two years ago.

THE BRASS

GM Ron Francis jettisoned Hakstol in favor of the more "player-friendly" Bylsma, who is close to the team's future core. Francis must show ownership he can build for the present as well as the future in a sports market that's been lukewarm to his product thus far.

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. Shane Wright
Pos C Age 20
2023-24 Coachella Valley (AHL)
Patience paid off in rookie AHL season. He's bound for NHL with eyes on a middle-six spot.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

2. Berkly Catton
Pos C Age 18
2023-24 Spokane (WHL)
Dominant WHL campaign for solid two-way center. Not big. Not exceptionally fast. But high IQ.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

3. Ryker Evans
Pos D Age 22
2023-24 Coachella Valley (AHL)
Split time between AHL and NHL, and he didn't look out of place in latter. Offensive bent to game.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

4. Julius Miettinen
Pos C Age 18
2023-24 Everett (WHL)
Smooth transition to major junior. He knows how to find soft spots and attack dangerous areas.
Expected NHL Arrival '28-29

5. Eduard Sale
Pos LW Age 19
2023-24 Kitchener (OHL)
Tall and slight but uses wingspan to create offense. Deft passing leads to high-end playmaking.

Pos RW Age 20
2023-24 Ilves (Fin.)
Settled into pro circuit and used his bulk to shield puck, drive the net and unleash his heavy shot.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

7. Carson Rehkopf
Pos LW Age 19
2023-24 Kitchener (OHL)
Natural-born finisher with a hard, accurate shot. His 52 goals ranked second in the OHL.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

8. Jagger Firkus
Pos RW Age 20
2023-24 Moose Jaw (WHL)
Led WHL with 126 points and now headed to AHL. Lacks size, but he's tenacious on the attack.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

9. Ryan Winterton
Pos C Age 21
2023-24 Coachella Valley (AHL)
Reliable two-way game earned him an NHL audition in first pro season. Good scoring instincts.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

10. Lukas Dragicevic
Pos D Age 19
2023-24 Tri-City (WHL)
Defense starting to round into form and catch up with offensive ability. Still needs seasoning.

BY ERIK ERLENDSSON

THE TAMPA BAY LIGHTNING marked the end of an era in the off-season. Steven Stamkos, the face of the franchise for nearly two decades, parted ways with the organization that drafted him No. 1 overall in 2008 – and the one he captained for a decade – to sign with Nashville. Looking to get out of the first round for the first time since 2022, Tampa Bay's roster will look drastically different this season. Gone, too, is marquee defenseman Mikhail Sergachev, who was sent to Utah in a draft-day deal.

While those moves made headlines, it was the acquisition of left winger Jake Guentzel that made the biggest splash. With three consecutive 30-goal seasons and seven straight 20-goal campaigns, Guentzel was the biggest part of Tampa Bay's off-season overhaul. The Bolts also brought back Ryan McDonagh to help shore up a back end that had lost some depth. Defenseman J.J. Moser and center Conor Geekie, the No. 11 pick in 2022, arrived as part of the Sergachev trade. Tampa Bay also signed veteran forwards Zemgus Girgensons and Cam Atkinson.

OFFENSE

Nikita Kucherov enjoyed a season for the ages with a league-high 144 points, and he became the fifth player – and first winger – to record 100 assists in a season. (Connor McDavid became the fourth NHLer to do so just two days earlier). The scoring revolves around Kucherov and a top line that includes 50-goal scorer Brayden Point and presumably Guentzel. But the Lightning will need depth scoring to take some pressure off the top line. Anthony Cirelli is coming off a career-high in goals (20) and points

VICTOR HEDMAN

(45), Nick Paul broke through with a career-high 24 goals, and Brandon Hagel scored 26 times on his way to a career-high 75 points.

DEFENSE

When the Lightning won championships, they did so on the strength of their left-side defense. That strength returns with McDonagh coming back after two years in Nashville to join Hedman and the newly acquired Moser, who had a top-four role in Arizona the past two seasons. Expect Erik Cernak to be rejuvenated playing with McDonagh again. The two were the team's primary shutdown pair for three seasons. Darren Raddysh returns for his second full season, while the Bolts need a bounce-back showing from Nick Perbix.

GOALTENDING

Andrei Vasilevskiy remains Tampa Bay's best chance to get back to a championship level. When he plays like the world-beating goalie he's been for most of his career, the Lightning are an elite team. Back surgery in training camp last year kept him out for the season's first six weeks, then he wasn't able to find that consistent elite level. After a full off-season of training, the Bolts look to return to contention with a healthy Vasilevskiy.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Tampa Bay had the NHL's best power play last season (28.6 percent), continuing a long run of PP success. With Hedman on the point, Kucherov the quarterback off the half-wall and Point in the middle, the Lightning should still be lethal on the man advantage. But without Stamkos, who tied for third in the NHL last season in PP goals (19), the power play must be reworked. The Bolts will need to find a way to fit in Guentzel on the top unit. Getting McDonagh back on the penalty kill takes some of the responsibility off of Hedman, while Girgensons will step in for the departed Tyler Motte.

INTANGIBLES

One of the Bolts' strengths in recent years has been their leadership, starting with Stamkos. But this year, there will be a void. While leadership isn't just about one player, team captain Stamkos was held in high regard. Will the Lightning leave the captaincy vacant or give the 'C' to Hedman? Either way, the voice in the dressing room will have a different tone.

ROOKIES

Eight rookies made an appearance for Tampa Bay last season. The farm system has taken a hit over the years, but it's not depleted. The Lightning have a blue-chip prospect in Geekie, who will compete for a spot in training camp. Gage Goncalves, Maxim Groshev, Lucas Edmonds and Dylan Duke are also in the mix up front.

X-FACTOR

How long Stamkos' absence hangs over the roster might determine what kind of start the team gets off to – and they need a good start. If the results don't show up on the ice in the early going, it could derail the season quickly. But if they can push past the obvious storyline and show improvement, they'll remain in contention in a competitive Atlantic Division.

THE BRASS

GM Julien BriseBois put his reputation on the line by letting Stamkos walk and trading Sergachev while bringing in Guentzel. After years of massaging the roster, BriseBois went bold to keep the team in the Stanley Cup conversation.

BY CASEY IPPOLITO

ONE SEASON REMOVED FROM winning their first playoff series in 19 years, the Maple Leafs returned to a familiar script: a dramatic and devastating first-round exit. The core of Auston Matthews, William Nylander, John Tavares and Mitch Marner are the highest-paid forward quartet in the league but have yielded a single series win in six attempts. And yet, they enter another season intact.

Following the seven-game playoff loss to Boston, coach Sheldon Keefe was dismissed after five years on the job. Enter Craig Berube, who helmed St. Louis to the Stanley Cup in 2019. Under Berube, Toronto will likely score fewer goals at 5-on-5 as they adopt a style that's more aligned with the playoff grind.

OFFENSE

As top-heavy as ever, Toronto's forward group returns with downgraded depth on the wings. Matthews and Nylander will combine for somewhere around 100 goals. Tavares and Marner should eclipse 20 apiece, but there aren't any other sure bets for 20 goals. Matthews led the league last year with an absurd 69 tallies – tied for the 15th-best goal-scoring season in NHL history. Tenacious playmaker Max Domi, who established chemistry on Matthews' right wing and also performed well at third-line center, signed a team-friendly four-year extension. After a career-high 56 games and 27 points, 23-year-old Nick Robertson requested a trade. But he could benefit most from the departure of Tyler Bertuzzi on a somewhat thin left side that also features hardnosed Bobby McMann and Matthew Knies, the latter of whom showed a promising blend of grit and skill in his rookie year.

DEFENSE

There are obvious potential downsides to signing 34-year-old Chris Tanev to a six-year deal. But with a short-term view, the Leafs get an elite shutdown defenseman expected to be a natural fit opposite left-handed gunslinger Morgan Rielly. Jake McCabe was Toronto's best blueliner in the playoffs and will be a second-pair staple, along with Simon Benoit, Timothy Liljegren or UFA signee Oliver Ekman-Larsson. Ekman-Larsson's best days are in the past, but he's still a solid defender who just won a Stanley Cup as a regular in Florida. He's a viable power-play point man, too. Though getting solid support from the forwards in the defensive end has been better in recent years, it continues to be a work in progress.

GOALTENDING

Joseph Woll has played just 36 regular-season games over the past three years and has struggled with injuries, but he has intriguing upside as he enters his first season as the expected starter. Woll will have healthy competition from Anthony Stolarz, a journeyman who had a league-best .925 save percentage in 27 games last year in Florida. Dennis Hildeby had a solid rookie pro season in the AHL, while injury-plagued veteran Matt Murray was re-signed for depth.

SPECIAL TEAMS

The story is the same year after year: the power play sizzles in the regular season, then wilts in the playoffs. Incoming assistant coach Marc Savard will work with the power play after serving under Berube in St. Louis. Ekman-Larsson is an option to replace Rielly on the top unit. Penalty-kill fixture David Kampf will get help from newcomer Tanev, but ultimately, any improvement on the PK hinges on goaltending.

INTANGIBLES

Marner's relationship with the organization and fan base has been contentious at times, and he once again came under scrutiny after another disappointing playoff effort (three points in seven games). His name was the one that came up first in any external discussions about breaking up the 'Core Four.' His future could depend on Berube, who will try to install a new identity to a roster that's largely unchanged.

ROOKIES

Easton Cowan, the No. 28 pick in 2023, was the OHL MVP in both the regular season and playoffs and will push for a spot with his goal-scoring acumen. Fraser Minten, a 20-year-old center who played four games out of camp last year, will get another look. Homegrown D-men have been scarce in recent years, but Topi Niemela, 22, had 39 points in the AHL and is on an NHL trajectory.

X-FACTOR

The swiftest path to improvement lies in a single metric: team save percentage. Last year's .893 mark ranked 23rd as the Leafs never found stability in goal. Regardless of how well the roster meshes with Berube, the club will only succeed with capable netminding.

THE BRASS

Many believed team president Brendan Shanahan would be dismissed after another fruitless post-season, but new MLSE president Keith Pelley appeared with Shanahan at a post-series press conference and spoke glowingly about him. Shanahan is still the man at the top when it comes to the vision of the roster.

BY AUSTIN FACER

THE NHL HAS ARRIVED in Utah after a whirlwind relocation. Shortly after playing their last game in Tempe, the Arizona Coyotes' roster and franchise rights were purchased by tech billionaire Ryan Smith and the team was moved to Utah, set to take the ice at Delta Center in downtown Salt Lake City.

Smith has wasted no time creating a buzz around the temporarily named Utah Hockey Club. Not long after the relocation announcement, a capacity crowd at Delta Center was on hand to greet the team with reportedly 30,000 deposits made for season tickets. The fans are getting involved in a vote to determine the team's permanent name, which has yet to be announced. Combined with an arsenal of cap space, early draft picks and a core group of young talent, optimism is in the air for a roster that finished 36-41-5 last season in Arizona.

OFFENSE

Utah's forwards are defined by their youth and potential. Last season, Clayton Keller, 26, once again led the team in goals (33), assists (43) and points (76). And the group around him got much better – five of Keller's teammates joined him as 20-plus goal-scorers. Logan Cooley, the No. 3 pick in the 2022 draft, turned in an electric first year, playing all 82 games and posting 20 goals and 44 points to earn a spot on the all-rookie team. The forward group is the team's strength and will be supported by a big addition on the back end. Obtained in a draft-day trade, former Tampa Bay defenseman Mikhail Sergachev brings a heavy shot and strong playmaking to a team that badly needs an offensive punch from the blueline.

DEFENSE

Utah upgraded its blueline with a pair of trades on draft day. The team acquired two-time Stanley Cup champion Sergachev from the Lightning and veteran blueliner John Marino from New Jersey. Ian Cole, another two-time Cup-winning defenseman, was signed to a one-year deal in free agency. Along with the returns of Sean Durzi, Juuso Valimaki and Michael Kesselring, Utah now boasts a much more formidable defense corps. Sergachev, the ninth-overall pick in 2016, missed most of 2023-24 with a broken leg but put up a career-high 64 points in 2022-23. His large stature and ability to make plays checked all the boxes that teams look for in a true top-pairing defender.

GOALTENDING

Connor Ingram, who took home the Masterton Trophy last season, will start 2024-25 as the No. 1 goalie. In his first 30 games last year, he had a .919 save percentage and 2.47 goals-against average. However, he stumbled to an .889 SP and 3.57 GAA in his final 20 games. Karel Vejmelka will be the No. 2 option in net with a chance to take over if Ingram falters.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Utah (as the Coyotes) was a middle-of-the-road team on the power play last year, ranking 15th overall (22.0 percent). The club was closer to the bottom of the league on the penalty kill, at 25th overall (76.3 percent). Nick Schmaltz, whose 22 goals tied for third on the team, scored 10 times on the man advantage. Sergachev will be a key distributor on the power play. In his last full season in 2022-23, he had 24 PP assists for Tampa Bay.

INTANGIBLES

Midway through last season, the Coyotes' campaign went into a tailspin that included a 14-game losing streak as relocation rumors swirled. Now, taking the ice as Utah Hockey Club, the team is energized by a fresh start and all the excitement that surrounds it in a new location. How much will the newfound stability translate to wins? Time will tell. The newly acquired veteran leadership will be crucial in pushing young stars such as Keller, Cooley and Dylan Guenther even further along in their development.

ROOKIES

Right winger Josh Doan scored five goals and nine points in 11 games at the end of last season and appears ready for full-time NHL duty. Further down the depth chart, right winger Miko Matikka and left winger Julian Lutz both inked entry-level deals in the summer. Matikka leaves the University of Denver after winning an NCAA championship as one of the team's leading scorers. Lutz also showed great promise, scoring 24 goals in 50 games for USHL Green Bay. Both are likely to start the season in the AHL.

X-FACTOR

All eyes will be on Utah in the team's first season in a new location. The Hockey Club's first home game, set for Oct. 8 against Chicago, is set to be broadcast on national TV. Will the team embrace the excitement and capitalize on the buzz to get off to a hot start?

THE BRASS

GM Bill Armstrong and coach Andre Tourigny continue to build the roster and guide the team's on-ice philosophy. They'll report directly to former powerhouse sports agent Chris Armstrong, who heads the chain of command as the alternate governor and president of hockey operations.

VANCOUVER CANUCKS

THE CANUCKS WENT BIG-GAME hunting in their remarkable 2023-24 season. In a dramatic 26-point improvement, they rocketed to 109 points and a Pacific Division title. It was their first playoff appearance in four seasons and just their second in the past nine years.

Voters got it right when Rick Tocchet was named the NHL's best coach, and dynamic defenseman Quinn Hughes claimed the Norris Trophy, the first time a Canucks blueliner earned the honor. Thatcher Demko was also a Vezina Trophy finalist. But there's just one problem with the impressive performances, points and plaudits: the Canucks have now gone from hunters to the hunted.

And when you consider the free-agent departures of center Elias Lindholm, defensemen Nikita Zadorov and Ian Cole and backup goalie Casey DeSmith, there's a challenge. On the plus side, Vancouver addressed the pressing need for a top-six winger to skate with Elias Pettersson. Jake DeBrusk was down the wish-list order but rose to the top after Jake Guentzel, Sam Reinhart and Tyler Toffoli signed elsewhere. The Canucks also added versatile forwards Danton Heinen, Kiefer Sherwood and Nathan Smith in free agency along with towering defensemen Vincent Desharnais and Derek Forbort.

>OFFENSE

J.T. Miller remains the straw that stirs the drink. He had a career-high 103 points last season to finish ninth in league scoring. Miller and right winger Brock Boeser, who hit the 40-goal plateau (including 16 power-play goals), will see revolving left wingers until the team finds the right fit. Pettersson couldn't find consistency with a variety of options on his wings and went from superlative to suspect in the second half of 2023-24 when slowed by knee tendinitis. Still, he finished with 89 points and 13 power-play goals. Overall, with the additions of DeBrusk and Heinen, Vancouver has better depth and more options up front this season.

ELIAS PETTERSSON

DEFENSE

Hughes was named captain last season, and his leadership on and off the ice was impressive. A career-high 92 points led NHL blueliners, and his partnership with re-signed Filip Hronek, who had 48 points, ensures an effective top pairing. The problem is there's a drop-off after that. The rejuvenated Tyler Myers had 29 points last season, while second-pairing partner Carson Soucy battled injuries and had but six points in 40 games. Desharnais and Forbort bring size and snarl. The depth options are Noah Juulsen and Mark Friedman.

GOALTENDING

The return of a healthy Demko and the rise of Arturs Silovs bodes well. Silovs, 23, stepped up big-time in replacing injured starter Demko and DeSmith in the playoffs, which cemented his status as the backup this season. Demko was superb in 51 regular-season games, posting career bests in goals-against average (2.45), save percentage (.918) and shutouts (five).

SPECIAL TEAMS

The penalty kill finished 17th in the league at 79.1 percent in the regular season and sixth in the playoffs at 81.0 percent. The power play, meanwhile, featured a first unit that looked great on paper but became plodding and predictable in trying to thread the perfect pass to set up the perfect goal. It finished 11th in the regular season at 22.7 percent, then plummeted to 13.9 percent in the playoffs. DeBrusk will help as a net-front presence.

INTANGIBLES

Can third-liner Dakota Joshua, who finished seventh in hits among NHL forwards, build on his career-best 32 points last season? Can he improve on his eight playoff points in 13 games and get a first-line look with Miller? He was dynamic last season with Conor Garland and Teddy Blueger on the third line. Has Nils Hoglander arrived as a 24-goal winger to remain with Pettersson, or will he slip into bad habits?

ROOKIES

The Canucks are in win-now mode, and it's hard to imagine any prospects getting more than just the customary cup-of-coffee look. Wingers Arshdeep Bains and Linus Karlsson played eight and four games last year, respectively. Jonathan Lekkerimaki will get a chance at some point, as will defenseman Cole McWard.

X-FACTOR

Vancouver had the ninth-best road record last season. With six-game stretches away from home in November and March, the team's ability to continue that success could decide their fate in the Pacific Division pecking order.

THE BRASS

Tocchet got the buy-in and improved fitness, resiliency and defensive structure last season. He needs former skills coach Yogi Svejkovsky to help improve the power play as a new assistant. GM Patrik Allvin isn't afraid to swing for the fences in trade talks.

BY SCOTT ZERR

A YEAR AFTER WINNING THE Stanley Cup, the Golden Knights made an unexpectedly hasty exit from the 2024 playoffs. It was like watching a big-time headliner on The Strip deteriorate into a club act, which was definitely not what the Golden Knights had in mind after once again going big-name hunting at the trade deadline. It was a fall from grace, but in the parity-rich NHL, things can turn around quickly.

Regaining past glory won't be easy, however, with fan-favorite and original 'Golden Misfit' Jonathan Marchessault topping a list of prominent players who moved on this summer. The Knights enter 2024-25 with plenty of questions, but with their history of acquiring shiny toys via trade, they're not a long-shot just yet.

OFFENSE

The Golden Knights saw more than 70 goals and 180 points disappear from last year's lineup when free agency began on July 1. Jack Eichel will surely score more than the 31 goals he managed during an injury-shortened season where he played just 63 games, but Vegas enters the new campaign loudly wondering where the rest of the offense is going to come from. William Karlsson hit 30 goals last year for the first time since his breakout 43-goal season in 2017-18. Tomas Hertl, a surprise trade-deadline acquisition from San Jose, will aim for a third 30-goal season. And if the Golden Knights can get anything close to 60 games out of two-way stud Mark Stone, that will go a long way, as he's a point-per-game producer on the wing. The Knights are definitely going to need to unlock whatever stymied newcomer Victor Olofsson and get another gear out of Ivan Barbashev and Pavel Dorofeyev.

VEGAS GOLDEN KNIGHTS

ALEX PIETRANGELO

DEFENSE

Alex Pietrangelo, Shea Theodore and Noah Hanifin give the Golden Knights a top three who make the majority of the league a little envious. Between them, they boast a solid mix of playoff experience and ample skill, while both Pietrangelo and Theodore will be out to improve on last season's offensive output. The Knights went big on Hanifin, acquiring him at the trade deadline and immediately signing him to a long-term deal. Original 'Misfit' Brayden McNabb continues to give a yeoman's effort, and Vegas has a competent bottom pairing in Nic Hague and Zach Whitecloud. Top prospect Lukas Cormier is also pushing for a spot.

GOALTENDING

The net now fully belongs to past playoff hero Adin Hill after the trade that sent former tandem partner Logan Thompson to Washington for a pair of third-round picks. Hill has had some injury issues but made 35 starts in 2023-24. The Golden Knights brought in Ilya Samsonov via free agency and traded for Akira Schmid to give them a pair of options at the back-up role and some security if Hill gets hurt again.

SPECIAL TEAMS

A two-way talented roster should not have the problems the Golden Knights had on the power play (20th) and penalty kill (16th) last season, and losing multiple penalty-killers won't help. Stone would make both units better, but his health is a perennial question mark. The departed players accounted for more than 40 power-play points last year, so that unit going to need a significant lift from Hertl and Hanifin. Olofsson could also have a hand in improving power play. Of his career 182 points, 61 have come with the man advantage.

INTANGIBLES

The Golden Knights would certainly benefit from a turnaround in fortune for newcomers Olofsson and Alexander Holtz. Olofsson had just seven goals last year, but he's had three 20-plus goal seasons in the past, and Vegas is banking on a return to that kind of production. Holtz isn't about to replace Marchessault, but he'll get ample opportunity to showcase the skills that made him a top-10 pick in the 2020 draft.

ROOKIES

The cupboard isn't bare, but after all the trades that dispatched top picks and prospects, there is a shortage of up-and-comers who are ready to jump into the lineup. Defensemen Cormier (drafted 68th overall in 2020) and Daniil Chayka (38th in '21) could see spot duty this season.

X-FACTOR

A first-round exit for the reigning Stanley Cup champions was an unexpected and harsh blow. That, followed by an unpopular teardown of the roster and the seemingly never-ending health issues of captain Stone leaves a big question: will the coming season see a stunning return to glory or the start of a downward trend?

THE BRASS

GM Kelly McCrimmon goes into the season with a team that doesn't look close to what it has been in previous years. Vegas lost a lot to free agency, but McCrimmon is never afraid to pull off a monster trade (see: Eichel, Hertl, Hanifin) and another big swing could change the Golden Knights' trajectory in a flash.

WASHINGTON CAPITALS

BY BEN RABY

THE CAPITALS RETURNED TO the post-season after a one-year absence, though it was hardly conventional. Leaning heavily on netminder Charlie Lindgren, Washington overcame a seven-point deficit in early March and made the playoffs on the penultimate night of the regular season. Washington's minus-37 goal differential was the worst by a playoff team since 1991.

A feel-good story for a resilient bunch? Sure. Sustainable? Unlikely. That's why management went to work over the summer. In a span of 12 days, the Caps overhauled about one-third of the roster. Through trades and free agency, they added forwards Pierre-Luc Dubois, Andrew Mangiapane, Brandon Duhaime and Taylor Raddysh, blueliners Jakob Chychrun and Matt Roy and goalie Logan Thompson. The acquisitions are all in their 20s, which is a welcome infusion of youth. As Alex Ovechkin chases history, the Caps' goal has been to retool, not rebuild. The offseason moves ensure the playoff window remains open.

OFFENSE

Once a perennial top-10 offense, the Capitals were held to two goals or fewer in 44 games last season. They finished 28th in scoring, and their 2.63 goals per game was their lowest in 20 years. Ovechkin overcame a slow start (eight goals in 43 games) with 23 goals in his final 36 games. He then went pointless in a playoff series for the first time, with management suggesting the second-half surge left him gassed. Fresh faces Dubois and Mangiapane bolster the top six. Dylan Strome set career highs with 27 goals and 67 points. Connor McMichael chipped in 18 goals. Chychrun is a welcome addition after Chicago's blueline was the only one to score fewer goals than Washington's last season.

WASHINGTON CAPITALS

DEFENSE

Despite their anemic offense, the Caps showed a knack for winning low-scoring, grind-it-out affairs. Goaltending was key, but Washington also developed a disciplined game and gradually grasped coach Spencer Carbery's man-to-man defensive system. In his 15th NHL season, John Carlson led the league in average ice time with a career-high 25:54. The Caps want to spread some of those minutes around. Chychrun and Roy provide more balance on the back end and figure to alleviate some of Carlson's heavy lifting. Roy will play behind Carlson as a top-four right 'D' while adding size and a blue-collar game. Chychrun, Martin Fehervary and Rasmus Sandin will have a healthy competition on the left side.

GOALTENDING

Lindgren emerged as the undisputed No. 1, starting 19 of the final 22 games during Washington's playoff push. Arguably the team's MVP, Lindgren established career highs with 25 wins and six shutouts in 48 starts. He'll be pushed by Thompson, who proved in Vegas he's capable of carrying a load. The Caps have tremendous value in net, as the tandem combines for less than $1.9 million against the cap. Both are pending UFAs, however.

SPECIAL TEAMS

The Capitals hope stability will lead to sustained power-play success. Due to injuries and performance, Washington's power play lacked consistent personnel last season. Through 41 games, the power play ranked 30th at 13.4 percent. Over the second half, it tied for first at 27.6 percent. The departed Nick Jensen and Beck Malenstyn were among Washington's most utilized penalty-killers. Their roles should be filled by newcomers Roy and Duhaime.

INTANGIBLES

Less than a year after franchise stalwart Nicklas Backstrom stepped away due to chronic hip issues, T.J. Oshie could be next (back injury). His leadership and ability to drag teammates into games can't be understated. Adapting without Oshie will be a challenge. Ovechkin's pursuit of Wayne Gretzky's goal-scoring record – he's 41 back – remains a motivator within the organization.

ROOKIES

Top prospect Ryan Leonard returned to Boston College for his sophomore year, but he's expected to turn pro once his NCAA season ends. The power forward and 2023 first-rounder could be an impactful late-season addition. Snipers Ivan Miroshnichenko and Ethen Frank will be among the first AHL recalls.

X-FACTOR

After a disappointing season in L.A., Dubois joins his fourth team in five years. Dubois' ice time was limited in Los Angeles, but a bigger role is envisioned in D.C. With a hefty contract and four-year no-move clause, Dubois must deliver.

THE BRASS

The Capitals bought what Carbery was selling last season. Chris Patrick was promoted to GM after 16 years with the franchise, while Brian MacLellan stays on as president of hockey ops. There remains a desire to thread the needle between building for the future and remaining competitive.

TOP 10 PROSPECTS

1. Ryan Leonard
Pos RW Age 19
2023-24 Boston College (HE)
Swagger and skill in excess. Lethal shot. High IQ allows him to find soft spots in coverage.
Expected NHL Arrival '25-26

2. Ivan Miroshnichenko
Pos LW Age 20
2023-24 Hershey (AHL)
Big-league shot and no lack of heart. Will need to put in effort to improve defensive game.
Expected NHL Arrival '24-25

3. Terik Parascak
Pos RW Age 18
2023-24 Prince George (WHL)
WHL's top rookie scorer has equal parts guile and elite skill. Trajectory has been impressive.
Expected NHL Arrival '27-28

4. Andrew Cristall
Pos LW Age 19
2023-24 Kelowna (WHL)
Effort to improve skating bodes well. Undersized scorer arrives in right place at right time.
Expected NHL Arrival '26-27

5. Cole Hutson
Pos D Age 18
2023-24 USA U18 (NTDP)
His size is a concern, but his scoring isn't. He's the all-time leader in points among NTDP defensemen.

BY JARED CLINTON

FEW TEAMS FIND THEMSELVES looking for a new coach immediately following one of the best seasons in franchise history. But the changing of the guard on the Jets' bench was one of timing rather than displeasure with the departing Rick Bowness.

Bowness, a veteran of 2,726 games behind an NHL bench, announced his retirement following the season, opening the door for the Jets to elevate associate coach Scott Arniel to the top job. The challenge for Arniel isn't to replicate his predecessor's performance but to propel the Jets beyond the first round of the playoffs for only the second time since 2018.

Arniel will enter the season with a similar mix of veteran talent and a handful of up-and-comers, and the difference between success and failure could come down to the growth of some of Winnipeg's young guns. Meaningful steps forward and the Jets will contend. Stagnation, though, and the club could head in the opposite direction.

>OFFENSE

The spotlight usually falls on top scorer Mark Scheifele, but last season was the sixth 30-goal campaign of Kyle Connor's career, and his 0.52 goals per game was better than that of all but 11 players to play at least half the season. Even if he improves on that mark, two players alone can't carry an offense. Gabe Vilardi needs to stay healthy, and Cole Perfetti must improve. As for offensive production from the blueline, do-it-all defender Josh Morrissey will again lead the charge. Cale Makar, Erik Karlsson and Quinn Hughes are the only defensemen with more points over the past two seasons.

DEFENSE

The Jets' focus in recent years has been on defending as a five-man unit, though that's had middling results. They've allowed the 18th-most shots and 15th-most high-danger chances at even strength over the past two seasons. Improving those numbers will require new structures and/or marked improvement by the team's blueliners. Dylan Samberg progressing into a reliable second-pairing defender would be among the best outcomes, and the rangy defender did look capable of moving up the depth chart last season. Winnipeg is also hoping this year marks Ville Heinola's arrival. The 20th pick overall in 2019 looked primed for NHL duty before an injury sidelined him last pre-season. If he reaches the next stage in his development, it would be a boon to the back end.

GOALTENDING

Pencil in Connor Hellebuyck for 60-plus starts. The reigning Vezina and Jennings Trophy winner has proven time and again his status as an elite regular-season goalie. But Winnipeg is ready to see Hellebuyck put his stamp on the playoffs. While he can't shoulder sole blame for the Jets' atrocious defensive showing in the 2024 post-season, he's posted a combined .905 save percentage and 3.13 goals-against average in the five playoff runs since Winnipeg went to the 2018 West final. Eric Comrie has the inside line on the No. 2 job, but there's competition in the form of Kaapo Kahkonen.

SPECIAL TEAMS

The Jets have been among the league's least penalized teams, finding themselves shorthanded 462 times over the past two seasons, and they allowed the ninth-fewest power-play goals per game over that span. As good as the penalty kill has been, though, the power play has ranged from mediocre to awful. The Jets scored at an 18.8-percent clip on the PP last season, the worst mark of any playoff team. The unit is in dire need of improvement.

INTANGIBLES

Winnipeg's core is well-established, as Scheifele, Connor, Morrissey, Hellebuyck, Nikolaj Ehlers and captain Adam Lowry have been together for the past seven seasons. A veteran core who can do much of the heavy lifting means the Jets have a reliable baseline for their performance, and it will give Arniel a solid foundation in his first season as coach.

ROOKIES

One-game cameos from Brad Lambert and Nikita Chibrikov at season's end gave a glimpse of two young, dynamic forwards on the bubble. Lambert, drafted 30th overall in 2022, led AHL Manitoba last season and was second-best among AHL rookies with 55 points. Chibrikov, selected 50th overall in 2021, was a revelation with 17 goals and 47 points in his first AHL campaign.

X-FACTOR

Have we seen the pinnacle for Scheifele – now 13 seasons and nearly 800 games into his career? While the Jets' fate is inextricably linked to Hellebuyck's play, they likewise stand to succeed or fail based on their No. 1 center's production.

THE BRASS

Arniel has spent the past 11 years in associate and assistant roles, and his last foray as bench boss was disappointing – he went 45-60-18 in 123 games with Columbus. Showcasing his growth as a coach will be critical to Winnipeg's success.

JEREMY SWAYMAN

NHL

INTERNATIONAL MEN OF MYSTERY

AT LEAST ONE PLAYER ON EVERY TEAM WILL BOOM OR BUST THIS SEASON

BY MURRAY TOWNSEND

WHY ALL THE mystery? We go to the trouble of analyzing players until we think we've got them pegged, and then they don't do what we think they would. Funny, that.

Mind you, we said last year that Connor Bedard would score 74 points, and if you project his total over the games he missed, it would be, you guessed it, 74. No international man of mystery there, but there are plenty of others. Here's one per team.

JOHN GIBSON, ANA

A top-flight goalie for many years. And then he wasn't. The mystery is who's to blame. He's not old at 31, so does the responsibility lie with Gibson or the terrible teams he's been forced to play behind? As Anaheim improves, we'll find out.

JEREMY SWAYMAN, BOS

Part of a dynamic duo for three years with Linus Ullmark. Did it work so well because both were so talented or because alternating allowed them to stay fresh? With Ullmark gone, it'll be a much heavier workload for Swayman now.

PEYTON KREBS, BUF

Buffalo didn't acquire the Vegas first-rounder in the Jack Eichel deal to be a 17-point scorer. He doesn't have a top-six role and hasn't been good in the bottom six. Since there are no other sixes, he's going to have to show something…and soon.

JONATHAN HUBERDEAU, CGY

The points he's earned in two Calgary seasons (107) don't even equal the points he got in his last season in Florida (115). It may take a change of scenery, but surely elite playmakers don't become this bad so quickly.

JESPERI KOTKANIEMI, CAR

After finally showing promise in 2022-23 with 43 points, he continued to produce early in 2023-24 with 15 points in his first 21 games. But in his next 58 games, he only had 12 points, and then just one point in 11 playoff games. That's not nearly good enough for a player making $5 million per season.

LUKAS REICHEL, CHI

After showing breakout signs, he had a disappointing season and had to be sent down to the minors. He gets another chance to make good this year.

JONATHAN DROUIN, COL

Will the real Jonathan Drouin please stand up? Is it the one who scored 19 goals last year or the one who popped just two the previous season?

PATRIK LAINE, CLB

He played just 18 games last year. It's easy to forget he once scored 44 goals in a season – and it's hard to picture him scoring that many again.

SAM STEEL, DAL

He put up a 50-goal, 131-point season in junior after Anaheim selected him in the first round. But three times he hasn't been tendered a qualifying offer, making him a free agent each time. Is his time up, or is there a glimmer of hope?

VILLE HUSSO, DET

Since winning the top job in Detroit, he's been anything but the top guy. Injuries are a factor, but when you earn $4.75 million, you should outplay the supposed backup, Alex Lyon, who earns $900,000.

DYLAN HOLLOWAY, EDM

Talent isn't the question. The problem is that there's nowhere for him to go. The power play is already too crowded. But what if he did get a chance in a scoring role? That's the mystery.

AARON EKBLAD, FLA

He's always been a good goal-scorer for a defenseman, but he's never been a big point-producer. Now, his ice time is diminishing, so can we even count on the goals anymore?

ARTHUR KALIYEV, LA

Usually, when you ask for a trade, you've done something to warrant interest from other teams. He hasn't done that, but it doesn't mean he won't blossom with a change of scenery.

JOHN E. SOKOLOWSKI-USA TODAY SPORTS

ALEX OVECHKIN

MARCUS JOHANSSON, MIN

Playing for six teams in the past eight years means he's either in high demand or teams are willing to get rid of him. In his past seven seasons, he's surpassed 30 points just once. He was a higher scorer prior to that, with five seasons between 44 and 58 points.

RAFAEL HARVEY-PINARD, MTL

After exploding onto the scene with 14 goals in 34 games, he dropped off last year, with just two goals in 45 games. Injuries were a factor, but even so, it's very difficult to be that unproductive, which doesn't bode well for his future.

CODY GLASS, NSH

In his 2017 draft year, he was hyped as the next Mark Scheifele. We haven't seen anything close to that. Yet.

CURTIS LAZAR, NJ

After being a disappointment in Ottawa, Calgary, Buffalo, Boston and Vancouver, the 2013 first-rounder was not a disappointment in New Jersey.

KYLE PALMIERI, NYI

A career-high 30-goal season at 33 is always suspicious. If everything is straightened out now as last season indicated, that's great. But it's just hard to get on board.

KAAPO KAKKO, NYR

He's shown flashes, but not often enough. Patience can pay off – as the Rangers found out with Alexis Lafreniere last year – but for our purposes, we've been patient long enough.

LINUS ULLMARK, OTT

Is Ottawa a situation where no goalie can be successful? Or can Ullmark actually be a savior?

SEAN COUTURIER, PHI

Is it over or not? Healthy scratches. Dismal production. And more injuries than at which you can shake a hockey stick. But he's won the Selke Trophy and produced 75-plus points. At 31, there's still time for him to get back there.

JESSE PULJUJARVI, PIT

Teams keep giving him a shot and waiting for the magic to happen. And waiting. And waiting. And waiting.

MACKENZIE BLACKWOOD, SJ

Young goalies are supposed to get better, not worse. In his first two seasons, Blackwood had save percentages of .918 and .915. His past two seasons: .893 and .899. Will he stabilize when the Sharks get better defensively and start to win?

PHILIPP GRUBAUER, SEA

Prior to joining Seattle: .920 SP. In three Seattle seasons: .893 SP. He's only 32, so it's not age-related. And it's not team-related, because Joey Daccord posted a .916 SP last season. So what gives?

JUSTIN FAULK. STL

Three seasons ago, he scored 16 goals. Then 11. Then just two last year. He's been up and down throughout his career, four times scoring at least 15 goals. Can he rebound once again to become a regular contributor from the blueline?

JAKE GUENTZEL, TB

He's proven he can score without Sidney Crosby, right? Those 17 games with Carolina are too small of a sample size. Tampa Bay has some elite potential linemates, but he's never had more than 40 goals.

NICK ROBERTSON, TOR

He's looked great at times, but then he gets hurt again, so we still can't get a read on whether or not he can consistently produce.

BARRETT HAYTON, UTH

After a semi-breakout season in 2022-23, where he scored 19 goals and 43 points, he only played 33 games last season. And they were not good games: he had just three goals and 10 points.

VASILY PODKOLZIN, VAN

After a nice rookie season in 2021-22, hopes were high. But in his second year, he was poor in 39 games and sent to the minors. Last year, he played 19 games without scoring a goal and again spent a lot of time in the AHL. The 10th overall pick from 2019 will get another chance to stick this year.

ALEX PIETRANGELO, VEG

He still gets a boatload of ice time, but he's not the top option for the power play, and he doesn't shoot the puck like he used to. Three years ago, he had 227 shots in 80 games. Last year, he had 141 in 64. His goals dropped from 13 to four.

ALEX OVECHKIN, WSH

Perhaps the biggest mystery is whether Ovechkin will score 42 goals to take over the all-time lead this season. He had 23 second-half goals last year after just eight in the first half.

RASMUS KUPARI, WPG

Prior to the 2018 draft, his Finnish coach said he was a mix of Jesse Puljujarvi and Sebastian Aho. It's looking like a bigger heap of the former. Twenty-eight games without a goal last year, and previous seasons weren't much better. This year may be his last chance to make a mark in the NHL.

NHL

BIG 'D' IS A BIG DEAL

THE NHL IS FASTER AND MORE SKILLED THAN EVER. ONE THING THAT HASN'T CHANGED IS THE IMPORTANCE OF A BRUISING BLUELINE IN THE PLAYOFFS

WE ALL KNOW THE NHL is a copycat league, and it was clear this summer that teams were interested in copying the Cats after the Florida Panthers held off the Edmonton Oilers in seven games to claim the Stanley Cup.

Florida captured the title with a big, strong defense corps – one year after the Vegas Golden Knights did the exact same thing. Heck, the Oilers themselves had a burly bunch on the back end, bringing a consistent theme to the past four finalists (Florida twice). The smallest member of Florida's 'D' was Gustav Forsling, who comes in at six-foot and 195 pounds. And he had 6-foot-4, 215-pound Aaron Ekblad as a partner. Not coincidentally, a number of playoff games against the Rangers and Oilers ended with 6-foot-5, 205-pound Panthers rearguard Niko Mikkola – as well as Ekblad – pinning the puck against the boards and daring opponents to wrench it out as the clock ticked down. Spoiler alert: they always failed.

But on the other end of the ice, the Oilers had some Alberta-quality beef of their own. Edmonton's back end was even bigger than Florida's crew, a veritable forest thanks to Mattias Ekholm, Darnell Nurse, Cody Ceci and others. Even Edmonton's premier point-producer from the blueline, Evan Bouchard, is 6-foot-3 and 190 pounds.

So, perhaps it's no surprise that the summer's hottest commodities were blueliners with size. Toronto got the dominoes toppling by trading for pending UFA Chris Tanev (6-2, 195), then promptly signing the shot-blocking shutdown king to a six-year deal. The Leafs continued their blueline makeover by nabbing one of Florida's erstwhile defenders, Oliver Ekman-Larsson (6-2, 190).

With Tanev off the board, other teams went in search of their own new stalwarts. New Jersey locked up another excellent defensive defenseman in Brett Pesce (6-3, 205), while Boston grabbed one of the biggest blueliners around in Nikita Zadorov (6-6, 250). In Utah, GM Bill Armstrong's first official blockbuster under new ownership was the trade that brought Mikhail Sergachev (6-3, 210) over from Tampa.

Which brings us to a bit of a paradox. Clearly, teams are valuing size on the back end – among other traits, obviously – in the pursuit of a championship. But when you think of elite defensemen in today's NHL, the mind wanders to the elite puck-movers and power-play QBs. Think about it: who just won the Norris Trophy? Vancouver's Quinn Hughes, all 5-foot-10 and 180 pounds of him. New York's Adam Fox, another recent Norris winner, isn't big, either. Cale Makar and Erik Karlsson are mid-sized, and Makar was the Conn Smythe Trophy winner when he helped the Avalanche to the Cup in 2022. Out of that elite grouping of four, only Makar has ever made it to the final, though, of course, that could change as soon as this season.

So, what does this tell us about the state of the NHL? I suppose the cheeky answer is, "Get yourself a Cale Makar who can achieve individual and team success," but that's not very practical, is it?

What it does bring into clear view is that the post-season and the regular season are different beasts, and the results reflect that. Makar's 2022 Avalanche may be the exception that proves the rule, but even that Colorado blueline wasn't tiny. Makar's partner, Devon Toews, is 6-foot-1 and 190 pounds – and Bowen Byram (now with Buffalo) is the same. Samuel Girard missed most of that playoff run due to injury, but he was part of the game plan even though he's only 5-foot-10 and 170 pounds. For bulk, the Avs relied on Josh Manson and Erik Johnson. Having a steamrolling group of forwards led by Nathan MacKinnon surely helped, too.

But if what we've seen in the past two Cup finals is any indication, teams tend to have bigger and meaner bluelines the deeper you get into the playoffs. It's a punishing time with so much on the line, and keeping the enemy on the perimeter is often the key to success. Having an array of bouncers near the crease tends to help as well. When Florida made the 2023 final, they did so by keeping their Eastern Conference foes to the outside, shutting down potent offenses from Toronto and Carolina along the way. When it came to the final, the Golden Knights were simply too heavy and fast up front to stop, especially given how banged up the Panthers were. One year later, a healthy Florida blueline helped the team march to glory. Who will follow them this season? H
